BUDGET WON'T RAISE WATER RATES

Today

Big Incomes Melt.
Oil Under Wine.
A Mussy Shah.
Ashes, Father and Son.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

PARIS WAITERS have had their annual race and Julian Gabriellanges won. The race leads from the Place de L'Opera all the way to the Place de la Republique, every waiter carrying a tray, with a full wine bottle and three glasses.

Those waiters can sympathize with European prime ministers whose life is one long race, balancing budgets, foreign debts and international troubles.

EVEN THIS country has its balancing and worrying, as Secretary Mills tells you in his annual report.

The "nuisance" taxes are a failure, as might have been foreseen. The income taxes have dropped tremendously.

BIG AMERICAN incomes have melted like thin snow with a cow lying on it. More than ten thousand incomes of $100,000 and more have dropped to fewer than four thousand. The national deficit in June will be more than eleven hundred million dollars.

Expenses must be cut, no choice about that. There are big items in our national budget, more than eight hundred million dollars for veterans, three hundred millions for agriculture, three hundred millions for the Navy, four hundred millions for war.

Uncle Sam can tell you that war doesn't pay, especially somebody else's war.

IT PAYS to pay what you owe: England knows it. You were told that if President Hoover demanded payment of England's debt the pound would fall, and commodity prices with it.

It is known now that England will pay, since she must, and yesterday the pound went up four cents.

CAPITALISTS ALL over Europe and a chosen few in America will become suddenly interested in three little Austrian villages, Zistersdorf, Duerknkrubt and Poysdorf, in lower Austria.

Underneath the beautiful vineyards of that wine country engineers have discovered important oil deposits.

WHEN THE Gauls, in their migration, encountered the vineyards and good wines in the French Bordeaux region, they stopped and built the great French nation.

Oil is more important than wine now, and this Austrian discovery may be worth as much as the territory stolen from Austria after the war.

BRITAIN HAS a problem in Persia.

The shah, formerly an unimportant employe of the British Persian embassy, takes seriously his seat on the "peacock throne," with its diamonds and rubies, and threatens to drive out Englishmen that have bought oil concessions in Persia. He cancels their concessions.

Britain backs up Britishers that have paid their good money and established rights anywhere in the world and replies diplomatically:

"Cancel nothing."

Will Britain refer this matter to the League of Nations? She will not; she will refer it, if necessary, to her Royal Air Force, and her airships will settle it without jeopardizing many if any British lives, and most uncomfortably for Persia.

THE ASHES of Napoleon's son, the little "king of Rome," will be taken to Paris from Austria and buried under the dome of the Invalides near the great, dark, marble tomb of his father. Some Frenchman will write an interesting poem about that pitiful weakness lying in the shadow of giant strength.

In Westminster there is another tomb holding the bodies of Pitt, who kept Napoleon out of England, and his father, Lord Chatham. English and French will not agree as to which tomb holds the higher average of ability.

MISS DIX, who can read the human heart, answering the question, "why do girls marry?" gives "boredom, fear and loneliness" as important forces pushing toward the wall.

Those forces amount to little. Big girls marry, as little girls play with dolls, because nature intends that they shall. Really important things relating to the preservation and perpetuation of the race we do without knowing why. Nature does not leave them to chance.

EDWARD CANTOR, able young actor, is amusing on the stage or screen, especially when he has to fight a bull and solves his problem by chloroforming it.

Mr. Hyman Abrams, according to police, did not find him so amusing. They say Abrams tried blackmailing Mr. Cantor with a letter saying:

"Silence is golden, and silence is worth $1,000 to me."

Mr. Cantor didn't think so. Mr. Abrams is under arrest.

IF THE Eighteenth Amendment of the Constitution is repealed, it is proposed to insert in the repeal amendment a clause prohibiting return of saloons.

Saloons should not come back, but repeal of prohibition should not be complicated by any saloon clause that would perpetuate expensive enforcement, with its blackmail and bootlegging.

COUNCILMEN PUSH QUEST FOR MORE SLASHES

Cuts By Departments Waited; Auto Use To Be Probed

Water rates for 1933 were fixed at present schedules today as Council continued seeking means of slashing Mayor Kline's $25,000,000 budget.

Council's action on the water rates precluded additional income to the city from that source. Suggestions had been received that water rates should be increased to make the income more nearly equal the cost of operating the Water Bureau and incidental activities.

At the same time President John S. Herron notified the Citizens' Committee on Additional Revenue that all suggestions as to increasing the city's income should be in by December 15, as on that date the 1933 millage would be set.

TAX NOTICES OUT

Notices were ordered sent out by the city treasurer to delinquent taxpayers informing them they may pay installments of not less than 10 per cent. In 1933 city taxes may be paid monthly.

No additional voluntary cuts were made by department heads at this morning's budget session, despite the drastic demands of taxpayers' organizations yesterday that $6,000,000 be lopped from the budget and taxes reduced from 3 to 5 mills.

Regarding the requested reduction of the Carnegie Library estimate of $549,700 by one-half, President Herron said:

"We can reduce it some, but not that much. The library returns to the people many times what it costs."

City Controller J. P. Kerr said he couldn't estimate what increase in revenues might be expected from "non-fixable" automobile tags.

ATTACKS TRAFFIC FORCE

Councilman Charles Anderson today demanded to know why traffic policemen were continued at corners were traffic lights are in use. He said:

"I have just returned from Cincinnati. For blocks where there are traffic lights no policemen were seen."

On Anderson's motion, Council voted to obtain data on Cincinnati's system. Other councilmen voiced the view that the investment in traffic lights had not resulted in the promised reduction in the number of policemen.

Council also passed a motion

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and Mrs. Butler have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, to Capt. Neville Lawrence, of London, England.

Miss Butler was graduated from Barnard College with highest honors in 1915. She became a Republican district captain in the Thirteenth Assembly District, in which the Columbia president's residence is situated, and was chosen co-leader of the district in 1921, a post she still holds.

For nearly 10 years Miss Butler has been vice chairman of the New York Republican State Committee. Since 1912 she has accompanied her father to every Republican national convention and has herself been a delegate twice.

Capt. Lawrence was educated at Oxford. He served throughout the World War as an officer in the Coldstream Guards. He is now a London banker and broker. His father is Sir Walter Lawrence.

Trotzky Mistakes Time, Misses Ship

VENICE, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Leon Trotzky, on the way back to Turkey from Copenhagen, missed the ship for Constantinople today because he miscalculated the difference in time between Italy and France.

He arrived from Marseilles by way of Genoa and found that the steamer on which he had expected to leave had gone an hour before. He will go down to Brindisi by train this evening and board the ship there.

DEATH SCENE RE-ENACTED ON YACHT

Suspect in Shackles Poses as 'Man at Porthole'

International News Service.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Dec. 8.—Heavily shackled but debonair and smiling, William James (Curley) Guy, suspect in the slaying of Capt. Walter Wanderwell, world adventurer and former German spy, today re-enacted the dramatic "face at the porthole" scene aboard the murder yacht, Carma.

He repeated again and again under police direction:

"Is Capt. Wanderwell there?"

LISTENERS WAVER

Wills, who had directed a mysterious stranger to Capt. Wanderwell on the night he was slain, said:

"If this were a minor matter I would positively identify this man as the one aboard the yacht that night. It looks like the man, but the voice is not the same."

Guy, former associate of Capt. Wanderwell, was taken into custody in Los Angeles early today.

Guy's name had been injected into the case when Mrs. Aloha Wanderwell, wife of the slain captain, told police of quarrels between her husband and Guy. Witnesses later tentatively identified Guy's picture as that of the "man in gray" seen loitering near the yacht Monday night, shortly before the adventurer was shot in the back.

An enmity born in Buenos Aires which flamed in Panama and led a trail to this tangled waterfront, brought Guy's arrest.

Guy, who stoutly denied that he had any knowledge of the crime, was arrested early today in a small house in Los Angeles to which he had moved from Glendale the day after the murder.

Detectives following a clue afforded by a quarrel last June between Guy and the world adventurer, traced him through a friend to his hiding place.

BREAK INTO HOUSE

"Stick 'em up."

"I've got 'em up. I know what you want me for. I've been expecting someone to come for me since I read in the papers that you were looking for me. I was just awaiting developments and would have given myself up in a couple of days. I have a good alibi."

Guy was held incommunicado in the Long Beach jail as officers were dispatched to the Los Angeles cottage where he was arrested, to pick up his clothes and search the premises.

Criminal science will be brought to bear on the case, police said.

SUNDAY FILM SHOW TO AID NEEDY HERE

Bundles of Clothing, Food Only 'Tickets' For Admission

Pittsburghers are going to the movies Sunday—and the needy will benefit.

Announcement was made today by Warner Brothers that continuous complete performances will be given in the downtown Warner Theater Sunday from 2 to 11 p. m. as their contribution to the relief of distress in the district.

No admission will be charged; no tickets will be sold and no cash will be accepted.

Instead, admittance will be through donations of food or serviceable clothing, old or new.

In other words, those who wish to attend may walk up to the entrance with a can of beans or tomatoes; a loaf of bread or sack of flour; an overcoat or a pair of shoes, deposit them with the man who is ordinarily the "ticket-taker" and be admitted to see a show as complete as the regular performances given at the Warner, including a full-length feature picture, a rollicking comedy and short subjects.

Warner Brothers are donating the use of the theater and the film, and a full staff of Warner employes are contributing their services.

According to a Warner Brothers announcement the project is designed for a three-fold purpose: Relief of those in need, to whom the donated foodstuffs and clothing will be given; stimulus of trade for merchants through purchase of the admission-contributions, and entertainment for those who attend.

CITY BLOCKS HUNGER ARMY

A squad of motorcycle police turned a score of trucks laden with so-called "hunger marchers" away from the city at the south end of the Liberty tubes today.

At the traffic division it was reported a police detail was assigned to watch the tubes for the arrival of the cavalcade, and to cause it to about face.

PROTEST PLANNED

Meanwhile, a committee from the International Labor Defense prepared to protest the action before City Council this afternoon.

The halted delegation, most of whom were reported to be from Ohio, returned to Mt. Lebanon to await the decision of Council.

Relief today was rushed to three Detroit women "hunger marchers," reported seriously ill and stranded along the National highway, 12 miles east of Uniontown.

STRAGGLING ARMY

They were part of the straggling army of 450 sheltered here from a biting wind last night. The women are in trucks that broke down, according to Frank Morton, of Chicago, who reported their plight to city authorities.

Sixty-five truck-loads had started west from Uniontown this morning. They had intended going through West Virginia, but West Virginia officers stopped them at Romney and they detoured through Pennsylvania yesterday, being fed and sheltered here last night. Ten trucks were reported stalled between here and the state line and many of the marchers were said to be in need of food and medical attention. A temperature of 10 degrees above zero was reported in the mountains last night.

Low of 20 Expected in Cold Wave

Winter weather, with subfreezing temperature and scattered snowflakes, swept in from the Northwest today, replacing the mild weather and rain of yesterday.

The blanket of cold spreads over virtually the entire country, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said, reaching into the Southern states and from the Rockies to the Atlantic.

Tonight the mercury is scheduled to drop to between 15 and 20. Cloudy and light snowflurries are predicted for tomorrow. The low overnight temperature was 28, a drop of 31 degrees from yesterday.

EAST END MAN HANGS SELF

Brooding over his separation from his wife, Samuel B. Evans, 25, ended his life by hanging in his home in the Georgian Apartments, 5437 Ellsworth avenue, last night, according to a report to the morgue.

Evans' body, fully dressed, was found hanging from a partially opened folding bed by his sister, Mrs. Eleanor Ridge, upon her return from a motion picture theater.

A note written in pencil on an envelope was found on a dresser in his room. Addressed to the police, it read:

The note had been signed: "S. B. Evans."

Mrs. Ridge said her brother had been separated from his wife, Mrs. Catherine Evans, two months.

HOMEWOOD BITTER IN JAIL CELL

Says He'd Serve Life Rather Than Marry Miss Gibson

By SYD BOEM
Universal Service.

NEW CITY, N. Y., Dec. 8.—Only hate remains in the heart of Sidney Herbert Homewood for Charlotte Gibson.

Spending his first evening with me in the grim privacy of the iron bars of Rockland County Jail here, this smooth-faced young horseman for the first time since his trial began betrayed his real emotions—his utter, cold disregard for this 23-year-old society girl, who stands on the threshold of unmarried motherhood. He said:

"If I knew I'd have to spend the rest of my life in prison, I'd still refuse to marry Charlotte Gibson."

REALIZES PLIGHT

With these words, all possibility of his marriage to the girl was tossed to the four winds. Homewood made this statement knowing full well that the only way he might escape punishment after yesterday's verdict of guilty would be to marry Miss Gibson.

Going to the jail after Homewood had been denied bail by the court pending sentence on December 13, I entered his cell. He talked and I listened.

He ranted at life's injustice and I finally came away with the conviction that Sidney Herbert Homewood's head was larger than his heart—that he was far too hard for his years. He said:

"Just because Charlotte Gibson couldn't have me, she wanted to make sure that nobody else would ever want me. Well, I suppose she and Gibson (her father) are plenty satisfied. Maybe they'll feel better after her child grows up and has to be told they sent me to prison."

Electric Needle Restores Life

Device Successful on Heart Victims

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Dr. Albert S. Hyman, director of the Witkin Foundation for the Study and Prevention of Heart Disease, has announced an electro-surgical device which, it is claimed, will in some cases restore seemingly dead patients to life.

The device is being manufactured on a commercial scale in Germany and a shipment for general distribution in this country is expected within a fortnight.

The instrument is to be known as the "artificial pacemaker." Its use includes the injection into the muscle of the heart of a needle within five to 10 minutes after the heart has stopped beating.

Report of experiments in cases where a patient with normal heart has met with shock, as in street accidents, on the battlefield, on the operating table or in childbirth, was that the apparatus restored life 59.6 per cent of the times used. The longest time between the cessation of heart beats and successful injection of the electrified needle has been 14 minutes.

Dr. Hyman published the result of his experiments in two articles appearing in "The Archives of Internal Medicine." He described the device as a substitute for the natural pacemaker, a structure located in the right auricle of the heart which supplies the pumping rhythm necessary for the circulation of the blood.

It may be used effectively in cases of drowning, it is claimed, providing too much water has not been taken into the lungs and in cases of electrocution providing the high voltage wire has not come into contact with the victim's head.

Birth Control Dispute Divides Churchmen

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Birth control was a subject of heated demate at today's session here of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

When recess was taken no definite action had been taken on the recommendation of the committee of Social Ideals which set forth:

"The interests of morality and sound scientific knowledge require the repeal of the federal and state laws which prohibit the communication of information about birth control by physicians and other qualified persons."

A motion was offered by Dr. David D. Burrell, of Williamsburg, Pa., to strike out the entire paragraph dealing with birth control. After vigorous debate it was decided to lay on the table the motion to eliminate.

W. O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State University and who is a Presbyterian, defended the birth control section and asserted:

"No subject is more widely practiced among Presbyterians that I know of."

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, suggested the section be changed to read "communication of information about birth control by physicians to those who consult them.

BRITAIN'S DECISION TO PAY SWAYS FRENCH PREMIER

HERRIOT FIGHTS DEFAULT MOVE BY DEPUTIES

Seeks to Overcome Opposition in Chamber

By FREDERIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—Confronted with the knowledge that the British government will make the war debt payment due to the United States on December 15, Premier Herriot, of France, will ask the Chamber of Deputies to approve payment of the French installment, with some chance of achieving a compromise decision, International News Service learned tonight.

Herriot learned of the British intention to make the payment in his long conference this afternoon with Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald, of Britain.

HERRIOT INFLUENCE

Francois Albert, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the chamber, revealed to International News Service that Herriot's request for permission to make the payment may bring a more favorable vote than hitherto anticipated.

Herriot had hoped to play a waiting game, but MacDonald forced his hand in the course of a lengthy conference by telling him Great Britain would not default on her $95,550,000 principle and interest installment one week from today.

The French Premier regarded the British stand as one of complete fairness so far as France itself is concerned, but it placed him personally in a hazardous position, because the Chamber of Deputies had left little doubt that it is almost unanimously in favor of defaulting the December 15 payment.

In talking with International News Service after the conference, Herriot insisted that Great Britain had shown a "most loyal attitude," declining to accept preferential treatment from the United States as the latter's largest debtor.

LAST PLEA RUMORED

PARIS, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—A report in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies this evening was that Premier Herriot, in agreement with Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain, had addressed a message to President Hoover asking him to make a last effort to arrange a moratorium on the debt payments due December 15.

An official communique issued after the conference of the two said the two countries will continue independent action with regard to the debts, but also will continue their efforts to obtain by international co-operation measures calculated to promote the economic restoration of the world.

RELIEF IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Indications from Paris that England would pay her war debt instalment on December 15 and that Premier Herriot would recommend to Parliament that France pay interest due lightened the atmosphere in Washington today but failed to bring any official comment.

Secretary Stimson was completing the American answer to France's second note requesting postponement and reconsideration, and the State Department announced this reply would be handed to Ambassador Claudel today or tomorrow.

The answer to Great Britain, made yesterday, it was indicated, probably would be made public in both countries through tomorrow morning's papers.

NEW POLISH NOTE

WARSAW, Poland, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—The Polish government has sent to the ambassador at Washington its second note regarding the $4,430,000 due the United States on December 15. It contains additional data to support the request for postponement of this payment and revision of the 1924 debts agreement.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Opposition to President Hoover's proposed 11 per cent federal pay cut was voiced yesterday by Representative Clyde Kelly, of Braddock.

Kelly said he thought the majority of federal employes were sufficiently low-salaried now, and that a governmental cut would set "a bad example for private industry and business."

KIN REPUDIATES ROXIE'S STORY

Angelo Vernacchio, 18, nephew of Rocco DiPippa, alias Roxie Long, government star witness, was the defense trump card played as it completed its case.

Vernacchio repudiated a statement involving four defendants, alleged to have made in the United States attorney's office prior to the indictments. He testified his statement involving Mike Damus, Papsy Meloragno, Carman Bosco and Arco Triano, was made at the suggestion of Long, on promise of immunity for himself.

Long's previous testimony also was hit by A. S. Swad, another defendant who pleaded guilty. Swad said he had been employed by Long in a number of moonshine-making operations and Long had promised to pay him $5 a day if arrested. Swad said he served seven months in jail and received no pay.

A. Kirshenbaum, J. G. Cancilla, Morris Lustig, Harry Kelly, James P. Mortorella, Philip Yoritch, J. Diznoff, Frank Mallinger, Saul Mallinger and other defendants denied being members of a liquor ring or that they knew of a conspiracy to violate the law.

'BADGER GAME' SUIT FAILS

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—The $300,000 suit for breach of contract brought by James G. Clark, of Mt. Kisco, Ky., against Norman W. Harris, Chicago banker, was dismissed today as contrary to public policy and based upon a corrupt, illegal and immoral transaction.

Counsel for the young vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank objected that Clark had tried to capitalize on his wife's alleged intimacy with Harris. The judge upheld the argument and threw the suit out of court.

In his ruling Judge John R. Caverly said Clark and his divorced wife, the former Dorothy Funk, of Des Moines, had operated a "badger game" against Harris.

The suit was based on an alleged contract made by Harris to pay Clark $500 a month for life, agreed upon when Clark returned to his Madison (Wis.) home after a trip and found the Chicago banker with his wife. Clark divorced her and obtained custody of their two children.

GOV. ROOSEVELT IN ALBANY

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Franklin D. Roosevelt returned to Albany shortly after noon today and went immediately to the executive mansion for a talk with leaders of the State Legislature about plans for the special session beginning tomorrow.

A long conference with city officials and New York bankers held in New York City last night, gave him details of the financial situation of the City of New York which brought the call by Acting Gov. Lehman for the special session.

In the conference were Charles E. Mitchell, chairman of the board of National City Bank; Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of Chase National Bank; George Whitman, of the J. P. Morgan Company; William H. Woodin, president of the American Car and Foundry Company, an old friend of the Governor; Mayor McKee, of New York; Lehman, and Comptroller Charles W. Berry.

FREE FILIPINOS, HAWES PLEA IN SENATE

Congress Swings Into Legislative Program Of Short Session

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Congress pitched into the work of its short session in earnest today, perfecting organization, taking up legislation for debate and laying plans for speedy handling of farm relief and veterans' economy questions.

Opening debate on Philippine independence in the Senate, Senator Hawes (Dem.), Missouri, co-author of the Hawes-Cutting bill granting freedom to the islands in 18 years, urged early action on the legislation.

OBJECTIONS RAISED

With indications pointing to favorable action on an independence measure some time next week, Senator Hawes spoke for his bill while Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York, a leader of the opposition, followed with a lengthy speech basing objections to independence on constitutional grounds.

The annual drive for immediate cash payment of the bonus was begun in the House by Representative Patman (Dem.), of Texas, with the statement that the outlay would provide needed currency expansion.

Patman, sponsor of the bill passed by the House and killed by the Senate last spring, said on the floor that there is too little money in circulation.

VET HEARINGS

Meanwhile, open hearings on all veterans' legislation and on possible methods of reducing expenditures for former soldiers, will be started tomorrow by a joint congressional committee.

Representatives of Spanish-American War veterans will be heard first by the group, which tentatively plans to call next Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, and then hear from veterans' organizations.

Hearings on the Democratic farm aid program will be launched next Tuesday by the House Agricultural Committee, with plans to limit the study to one week and then put a bill up for passage.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—A threat of tear gas quieted 140 prisoners in Maryland Penitentiary today when they began to jeeer and boo after refusing to work.

The majority of the 600 men who went on strike last Friday as a protest against reduced wages returned to work today after the warning that they must work or be subjected to solitary confinement.

When the jeering broke out, six guards, wearing gas masks and carrying pistols, gas cartridges and gas grenades marched through the section of the prison where the disorder was in progress. There was immediate quiet.

trial. Well, it wasn't any cinch for me. I had to sit there like a gentleman and listen to them hang me. Just because her family's blood is supposed to be a little bluer than mine, the jury felt her story to be true.

"Maybe you don't know it—probably no one does—but my family, my mother especially, have always been my first thought. If I had married Charlotte Gibson, where would my family have been? I've had to contribute money home—most of my money, I mean—for the support of the house.

"Suppose, considering the conditions, I had married her. Can you imagine how things would have been around the house with another woman, an unwelcome one, living there with my sisters and mother?

I asked him whether he did not ever pause to think of the position in which he had placed Charlotte Gibson. He said:

"It's all her fault. Why the deuce didn't she stop the thing when it first started? Lord, look at the jam she got me into."

FACES FIVE YEARS

The jury's verdict convicting Homewood was returned late yesterday.

The verdict leaves the young English riding master liable to a maximum sentence of five years in prison, a maximum fine of $1,000.

The jurors subscribed to the ringing last phrase of District Attorney Stebbins, who told them:

"We have the age-old struggle between the law and the seducer—this ace of cads must be convicted."

To this plea, Homewood's attorney had vainly answered:

"The woman tempted him and she knew full well what she was doing."

MOTHER WEEPS

The convicted riding master's face remained a mask as he heard the verdict. But his mother broke down. As she covered her face with her hands, and wept, Homewood's sister Dorothy put her arms around the mother and whispered:

"Don't cry, mother."

Mrs. Homewood, throwing her arms around her convicted son, cried:

"It wasn't justice. It was a show!"

Robert Gibson, father of Charlotte, was told of the jury's verdict, in an office above the courtroom. He said:

"I am completely happy. All Charlotte's anguish and pain will be softened now. The verdict justifies us."

HOUSE SPEEDS HEARINGS ON BEER BILLS

Hope for Floor Action Next Week; Tax Rate, Strength Discussed

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—The House Ways and Means Committee today sped its hearings on beer, with a view to winding up next Tuesday and submitting a bill for House action later in the week.

Chairman Collier announced the plan for getting some form of bill before the House proper without delay.

One after another, the witnesses for and against the legislation are to be paraded before the committee, so that early next week it can go into executive session to decide on the alcoholic content and tax to be recommended.

TIME LIMITED

Witnesses were told their time for testifying would be limited to 10 minutes each.

Representative Stafford (Rep.), of Wisconsin, as the first witness at the second day of hearings, said the people had approved the Democratic platform for modification of the Volstead act.

If the bill legalizes wines, Stafford felt there should be a "saving clause" so that if wines were held unconstitutional, the beer clause might still stand.

Stafford said if Congress passes a law legalizing 3.2 per cent beer, it would "in no way supersede state laws which declare such brew intoxicating." He explained:

"In other words, states which are strongly dry would not have beer forced upon them."

CITES DECISION

Pacing up and down before the committee, he said a decision by Justice Brandies of the Supreme Court had declared "all ales and porter" intoxicating. He said:

"Ales and porters are heavy beers.

"Some of them contain 10 and 12 per cent alcohol. In my opinion beer of 6 per cent is intoxicating.

"But nowhere do we find any decision that beer of more than one-half of 1 per cent is intoxicating, as beer, say, with a content as high as 2.75."

He held the opinion that the average beer sold in Milwaukee before prohibition was not intoxicating.

Representative O'Connor (Dem.), of New York, has a bill calling for beer with a 3.2 alcoholic content by weight, a percentage described as non-intoxicating by Stafford.

$5-BARREL TAX URGED

Questioned by Representative Treadway (Rep.), of Massachusetts, about the revenue phase of the bill, Stafford said:

"You don't want to put a premium on alley brewers. People in my state want cheap beer. I believe that with the $5-a-barrel tax as provided in this (Collier) bill, it will permit them to sell beer at 10 cents a bottle and 5 cents a glass."

Representative Dyer (Rep.), of Missouri, also urged speedy action, testifying:

"I think we are agreed that the American people have issued a mandate to Congress to modify the Volstead Act."

Alcoholic content put in the Volstead Act was "dishonest," he contended, and was put in simply because "a number of states felt it would help enforcement."

HARRISBURG, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Refusing to investigate the primary campaign expenses of Representative Louis T. McFadden, of Canton, Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, has suggested the matter be referred to Congress.

Mrs. Roosevelt Upholds Belief in Santa Claus

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Among all the distinguished guests who may visit the White House while the Franklin D. Roosevelts live there, none will be more welcome than Santa Claus.

This despite the fact that Mrs. Roosevelt is a teacher—in a school where many modern educational theories are in practice. She said:

"Why, of course, all children should believe in Santa Claus. The very idea! Believing in Santa Claus is the right of every child. It would be horrid to take it away."

Mrs. Roosevelt has a Christmas list with 300 names on it. She was wrapping up Christmas presents this year away back in September.

Each year she gives four big Christmas parties in addition to the family celebration—two for the children who live in an orphanage back of the executive mansion in Albany, one for all the Governor's office, executive and Hyde Park staffs, and one for 35 poor children in the New York club house of the Women's Trade Union League.

The Roosevelts believe in certain other old-fashioned Christmas customs, too. Every year either the Governor or Mrs. Roosevelt reads Dickens' "Christmas Carol" to the assembled family.

Sportsmen to Debate Sunday Fishing Ban

Would Sunday fishing be a boon or a menace to Pennsylvania sportsmen?

This is the question which members of the Pittsburgh Chapter, Izaak Walton League, will debate tomorrow night at a meeting in Rehearsal Hall, Carnegie Institute.

In a letter to members, Arthur W. Henn, secretary, points out that an attempt to repeal the Blue Laws, involving prohibition of fishing on the Sabbath day, will undoubtedly be attempted in the next Legislature.

Some contend, according to Secretary Henn, that "our waters cannot stand the additional burden which Sunday fishing is certain to impose." On the other hand, he sets forth that virtually every other state permits Sunday fishing, which he describes as "a quiet pursuit involving no boisterous desecration of the Sabbath."

'FLU' WARNING GIVEN BY CITY HEALTH HEAD

Requests From Poor Press Municpial Physicians

A caution to guard against influenza was issued today by Dr. Philip E. Marks, superintendent of the City Health Department, after Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Public Welfare Department, had informed Council the department was being hard pressed by requests for medical attention among the poor.

Dr. Marks said the Health Department had not been informed of any unusual condition to warrant alarm, but Mrs. Rauh said in a letter to Council that "an unusual and serious crisis" has arisen.

HEAVY DEMANDS

She said:

"This matter, which I am bringing to your attention, relates to a present epidemic existing in our city and the extraordinarily heavy demands made upon our city district physicians."

She told Council that calls for doctors through her office increased from 380 during the week beginning November 23, to 875 for the week beginning November 20. She said two city physicians, overworked during the period, were confined to bed with influenza.

She said "it has become humanly impossible" for the physicians to do the work satisfactorily and that it was necessary for additional doctors to be employed "in this emergency."

PRECAUTIONS LISTED

Dr. Marks suggested precautions against influenza. They are:

Avoid crowded, ill-ventilated places; dress warmly; eat simple, nourishing food; get plenty of rest; sleep with the windows open; avoid over-exertion; don't be afraid of fresh air. It is very important; don't visit unnecessarily families where there is sickness; don't treat yourself, but call a doctor; don't permit any unclean articles or fingers to enter your mouth; wash the hands before eating; don't neglect a cold.

One rascal, Buddy Miller, slugged.

Three hundred dollars worth of music stolen.

Uncle Henry, known in private life as Louis H. Abel, of 86 Industry street, told police he had left his automobile parked in Forbes, near Miltenberger street, while conducting a rehearsal in Fifth Avenue High School for a Christmas program.

DRY VIOLATION OUSTS SLEUTH

City Detective William J. Redmond's resignation was demanded by Public Safety Director James M. Clark today.

Redmond, appointed last Saturday, had been convicted in Federal Court on a liquor violation, it was revealed. He was fined $150. This morning, Clark summoned Redmond to his office and Redmond admitted that he had been convicted. Clark then asked for his resignation.

Commenting on his action later, Clark stated he was unaware of Redmond's record and declared:

"I would not have sanctioned his appointment."

Beginning today, Clark declared, the records of appointees to the Public Safety Department would be scanned closely for such things. He said:

"If we find the applicant has ever been convicted of a major offense, he will not be appointed."

Clark revealed he has forced the resignation of six patrolmen in the last year, following their conviction for various offenses.

in testing all suits found for any possible powder burns.

Intensive grilling, a "lineup" before members of the Carma crew, and the confronting of Cuthbert Wills, who led a man to Capt. Wanderwell shortly before he was shot, were planned.

PRISONER VIEWED

The first witness to view the prisoner was Harry Greenwood, a Long Beach man, who saw a man running from the Carma dock. He told police:

"I am not sure this is the man. The man I saw had a mustache. I would like to see him with an overcoat on."

Greenwood had previously declared photographs of Guy, taken with a mustache, resembled the man he had seen.

Guy talked freely of his experiences with Wanderwell, the wandering lecturer who was shot in the cabin of the Carma as he planned a new cruise with a half dozen pretty girls as members of the adventuresome crew. He told officers:

"I first met the Wanderwells in Buenos Aires where they were on an auto tour. I was attracted to them by their sign-plastered machine. So my wife and I joined up with them.

"Then we motored up to Panama. We were hard up for money, and the Wanderwells pulled out and left us stranded.

"I made my way up to the United States last June. I found Wanderwell was in Los Angeles and organized another adventure party.

"I thought if I went to him and demanded the $200 he owed me in front of some prospects that it would embarrass him and he would pay me.

TELLS OF QUARREL

"I found him in a Wilshire district hotel. He was excited and when I asked for the money he stuck his fist through the window and yelled for police.

"The police told us to come down to the station the next day and settle things. But I didn't dare do that, because I was an alien and I knew Wanderwell knew I was in the country illegally.

"That was the last I heard of Wanderwell until this murder episode. I have not seen his boat, and I do not know anything about the shooting.

"If I knew anything that would be of any aid to police I would gladly give it. The reason I haven't talked before is because of my alien standing, and because last fall I registered in the presidential election and I knew if this were uncovered, I would be arrested."

Guy, an intelligent and well set-up young man, appeared unconcerned over his arrest.

Police said they found an overcoat in Guy's house of the type described as worn by the "man at the porthole," who was seen aboard the Carma, shortly before Wanderwell was shot.

Guy, according to Mrs. Aloha Wanderwell, the victim's pretty 24-year-old widow, who had shared her daring husband's adventures in many foreign ports, had been locked in irons by Wanderwell on their last cruise, had been put off the boat at Panama, and had trailed Wanderwell to Hollywood and there attempted to strangle him after a blackmail attempt.

SLEUTH KILLED ON DEATH TRAIL

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Two days after he is believed to have uncovered a "hot tip" on the mysterious knife-murder of Norman R. Bechtel, young Mennonite church worker, City Detective Michael G. Croskey met a similar death last night in West Philadelphia.

His neck and chest slashed, Croskey died without being able to reveal the name of the assailant who attacked him in his garage.

Bechtel was found stabbed to death on an untenanted estate in the Germantown section last January. Efforts to solve the case failed. Strange knife wounds on Bechtel's forehead and chest puzzled authorities but, they said, there was no similarity between them and the wounds which caused the detective's death.

Soon after Croskey collapsed on the street near the garage police found an ice-pick and a heavy screw driver close to the scene of the killing.

Dr. McAdams died Tuesday morning, and his wife, who nursed him for several days under supervision of Dr. Blair, died yesterday morning. Dr. Blair was stricken with influenza Monday, it was learned at his home today.

to compile a list of all automobiles used by city officials and employes along with a list of telephones in homes for which the city pays with a view to elimination of those not deemed necessary.

LANG TO BE HEARD

Public Works Director E. G. Lang was waiting to be heard.

Thus far the department heads have reduced the Mayor's budget of $25,206,228 to the extent of $1,167,464. Most of this has been volunteered by Director Lang.

After hearing the reports of the civic organizations yesterday, President Herron, of Council, made a speech which gave hope for a tax reduction. He said:

"Quite a few of the things you have recommended will be carried out. It's just a question of how far Council can go. There has been in the last few days a complete reversal on the part of some of the department heads. We will pass a budget that I believe will meet with the approval of almost everyone in Pittsburgh."

DEMAND DRASTIC CUTS

The Real Estate Board has asked for a tax rate for 1933 of 20 mills on land and 10 mills on buildings. To reach this, the Real Estate Board would cut almost $6,000,000 out of city expenditures. The board takes into account a city deficit of $1,750,000, and also anticipates 2 per cent higher tax collections next year than the percentage figured by the Mayor.

The building owners ask for a tax rate of 18 mills on land and 9 mills on buildings. They suggest that the $2,000,000 deficit be funded with short-term notes to take it completely out of the 1933 budget. They would cut city expenditures to the extent of $5,500,000.

Council chamber was crowded to the doors as the representatives of civic organizations pleaded with Council to lighten the burdens of the taxpayers.

GROUPS JOIN IN DRIVE

There were a few exceptions to the general demand to cut the budget from one end to the other. The Civic Club of Allegheny County asked that the health, welfare, recreation and library services be maintained at the highest level of efficiency.

The Civic Club did join, however, in the request for reductions in taxes.

Neither the realtors nor the building owners appeared to make any exceptions in going after the city payroll. The realtors suggested payroll reductions and eliminations totaling $3,000,000. The building owners would take $4,162,800 out of payroll.

URGE PAY CUTS

Both groups insisted that furloughs be discontinued and straight payroll reductions be made. The building owners declared the straight cut should be 20 per cent, "beginning with the Mayor."

The realtors' report asked Council whether the taxpayers are to be considered or support is to be given to the "waste, extravagances and sinecures of a ward chairman's organization." The report was read by J. R. Brady, secretary of the board.

J. W. Bamford, speaking for the building owners, sharply criticized the Mayor for passing the responsibility for payroll adjustments to Council.

The realtors recommended that the Department of Welfare be abolished and that the activity be set up as a Bureau of Welfare under the Department of Health. They also recommended the elimination of the Mental Health Clinic and the Bureau for the Handicapped in the Welfare Department.

MAYVIEW HIT

The payroll at the City Home and Hospital at Mayview was hard hit by both realtors and building owners. The latter said that Mayview cost "to much money for a single institution," and the realtors said they have been informed of "gross extravagance" at Mayview.

While Council discussed the budget, Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Department of Welfare, sent in a note asking that 10 more doctors be temporarily placed on the payroll for emergency service during an epidemic of influenza which she said represents a serious crisis.

Council moved to tell Mrs. Rauh to ask help from the staff of city doctors in the Department of Health.

FATHER COX PROTESTS

The Rev. James R. Cox sent a letter protesting against the possible closing of No. 2 Engine House, 1412 Penn avenue, and stating it is necessary for the safety of his school, church and convent.

John Heinz, president of the City Firemen's Protective Association, asked that the pay of the firemen not be cut because of the hardships they are compelled to undergo in the line of duty.

M. K. McKay, professor of economics at the University of Pittsburgh, represented the Civic Club.

Other speakers for tax reduction included Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; Harry Bastow, president of the Allied Boards of Trade; R. L. McKallip, R. T. Mackintosh, E. A. Smith and Robert F. Morris, Jr., of the Real Estate Board; I. Leonard Aronson, of the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners and Taxpayers' League; Charles F. Chubb, Thomas Liggett, the Rev. E. M. Milligan, John Dimling and Mrs. R. P. Keenoy.

Boy Makes Own Telescope to Inspect Stars

EDWARD YOCHUR, JR., 14

Edmund Yochum, Jr., 14-year-old Dormont amateur astronomer, is one boy whose mother does not have to pull him out of bed in the morning for school.

Hours before the school bells ring Edmund takes his home-made telescope out in the yard of his home, at 1105 Mississippi avenue, to study the stars and the moon. Many times he stays up until the early hours to view the heavens. On other occasions he gets up before the milkman arrives.

His telescope is fitted with a six-inch reflecting lens and has a 40-inch focal length. It took him three weeks to grind the lens and a month to build the entire apparatus. He said:

"It's lots of fun studying the heavens, and I might become an astronomer some day."

Asked if he thought anybody would ever reach the moon, he replied:

"They may get there, but they won't have to worry about coming back."

PATIENTS SHOW DEPRESSION DIET EFFECT

Results of the depression and of the 90 cents a week food allowance to destitute are seen in the report of serious undernourishment of patients admitted to Lillian Convalescent Rest at Valencia, Pa., by Dr. Thomas S. Arbuthnot in the Kingsley Association Year Book for 1932, published today.

Lillian Rest is a department of the Kingsley Association, of which Kingsley House, an East End settlement, is the principal unit.

SLIM DIET BLAMED

Arbuthnot says:

"Outstanding in the history of the past year has been the reflection of hard times in the seriously undernourished condition of patients admitted. Lillian Rest cares for those most seriously affected by the lowered standard of living, who could not have gone any further without physical breakdown or permanent impairment to health.

"The moral is obvious—society in the end must pay a high price for causing any of its members to live on a diet without margin of safety."

RAPS RETRENCHMENT

James Lyall Stuart, constructing engineer and president of the association, marks "a general tendency on the part of every one to make the depression worse than it is," saying that:

"The policy of extreme retrenchment and self-protection when each individual waits for someone else to take the lead, reduces the purchasing power of the masses and thereby sets the date of possible recovery at a more distant point."

ASSESSORS' PAY CLAIM OPPOSED

The County Commissioners have been informed by their special solicitor, Mortimer B. Lesher, that five former assessors who petitioned for back salary are not entitled to it. The former assessors want pay for full time from November 15, 1931, to January 1, 1932, during which period they were on half pay with orders to work alternate weeks.

After being directed to work half time the men continued on full schedule, but Lesher declared they had "contributed" the extra service. After returning to full time the first of the year they were dismissed in the middle of May. They sought full pay for the month, but Lesher held their remuneration ceased when they were dropped. He also denied they were entitled to vacation pay they sought.

Lesher gave an opinion that David B. Roberts, former building supervisor, was not entitled to pay for the time he was under suspension when indicted on tax receipt fraud charges. Roberts asked for his salary when he was acquitted.

'KEEP MOVING' CHECKS ISSUED

Oversize Paper Shows Benefit of Money Circulation

"Prosperity checks" are circulating about town in the form of pay checks 17x6½ inches in size, just to demonstrate "how people benefit by keeping money in circulation."

Twenty-five indorsers are asked for each check before it is placed in a bank. A Detroit company, Cunningham's Drug Stores, operating the Shapero drug stores here and 70 in Michigan, issued the jumbo checks in their employes' pay envelopes. Each check was issued for $2. Explaining the chain idea in checks, a message reads:

"Idle money helps no one. Money in circulation helps everybody. So while this check may be cashed at any time at your bank, we suggest that instead you help keep it in circulation by passing it on within 24 hours to someone from whom you buy something, or in payment on account."

HONOR SEAMAN WHO PATCHED LINER'S HULL

Feat Averts Threat Of Peril to New Vessel at Sea

Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Conte Di Savoia, Italy's second new entry in trans-Atlantic traffic, steamed into harbor at the end of her maiden crossing to land passengers loud in their praise of her master's seamanship and the heroism of one doughty little able-bodied seaman of her crew.

Gennaro Amatruro, the seaman who Monday clung to a rope ladder slung over the ship's side to plug a 10-inch hole torn in her hull, took his honor in the way of men used to the hazards of the sea. He said:

"I joined the ship because she has a good captain. What I have done—it is nothing."

GETS REWARD

As the Conte Di Savoia plowed up the lower bay yesterday, Amatruro was called to the bridge. There he received his half share of the $850 purse made up among the passengers. The other half goes to the two other seamen who aided him.

Passengers told how at 5:15 p. m. Monday an outlet valve on the port side aft of midship broke off and water began to pour into the dynamo room. The hole was two feet below the waterline, but oil ballast was quickly shifted to list the boat 10 degrees and bring the hole above the surface.

By that time there was four to five feet of water in the dynamo room. A wooden plug was cut to fit the hole and Amatruro went down the rope ladder. Hanging there, buffeted by the sea, he fitted the plug and it was drawn through by volunteers in the dynamo room. Then it was cemented in place.

SEVEN HOURS LOST

Seven hours later, at 2 a. m., the ship was again under way. It arrived in New York seven hours late.

Of the accident, Prof. Herbert L. Seward, of the Yale mechanical engineering department, observer for the Italian government, said:

"What might have been an incident of more consequence was averted by the quick work of the ship's engineers and captain and the heroism of Amatruro."

JOB BARTERING LAID TO PINCHOT

PHILADELPHIA, Dec 8.—(AP.)—State Representative Morton Witkin in a letter today called on Gov. Pinchot to end "racketeering of jobs" in the State Highway Department, and using the department in building a political machine.

He charged that money contributed by the federal government for relief of Pennsylvania's unemployment and turned over, in part, to the highway department, was being used also to the advantage of the Governor and his followers.

Witkin accompanied his letter with a photostat copy of another letter, which he said was signed by H. W. Fry for Secretary Samuel S. Lewis, of the highway department, in which applicants for inspectors in the department were advised to obtain the indorsement of their local Pinchot "leader."

2 GIRLS, 3 MEN HELD IN PLOT

An alleged plot, revealed at a hearing last night in Alderman Edward W. Haas' office, today had resulted in the arrest of two girls and three men, on charges of blackmail, conspiracy to blackmail and conspiracy to indict.

Miss Sargeant charged Vinos with attacking her. Last night Miss Sargent, it is said, failed to identify Vinos, and on cross-examination confessed the suit was framed, and named the others as her alleged conspirators.

COUNT, ROGERS' POLO PARTNER IN BATTLE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—A dispute over a polo player's pay cost William Schurch De Witte, former Russian count and second cousin of King Carol of Rumania, partial blindness, a broken nose, two black eyes and the loss of several teeth, he told the California Accident Commission.

He said Morgan Flowers, polo partner of Will Rogers, actor-writer, gave him the beating. Fisticuffs started, the count related, after Flowers demanded $450 which he said was owed him for playing polo by E. John Brandeis, multi-millionaire, formerly of Oklahoma. De Witte was secretary for Brandeis, who sponsored a polo team.

Called before the commission, Flowers did not deny the beating, but asserted the Russian started the altercation. The commission took no action on De Witte's plea for aid after hearing both stories yesterday.

De Witte is the grandson of the late Sergei J. De Witte, former Russian premier.

BOY CONFESSES KILLING FATHER

DETROIT, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Judge George M. Read, of Juvenile Court, was trying to decide today whether it was just a coincidence that 12-year-old Gilbert Stuart killed his father on the very day he had planned to steal his pay check and automobile and start a career of crime.

For two days Gilbert maintained that the story of William Luka, a schoolmate, about his plans to set out for California in the family auto, robbing gasoline stations until he could get a job "in the movies," was a fabrication.

But a few hours after he attended the funeral of his father, Harry R. Stuart, he confessed last night, state police said, that it was true. He insisted steadfastly, however, the shot that killed his father Saturday was fired accidentally.

Mrs. Stuart, who is prostrated, insists Gilbert always has been "a good boy."

SEEKS DIVORCE FROM 'LIFER'

Her happiness blasted when her husband was snatched from her arms for a murder 18 years ago, Mrs. Nellie Pauletta, of Coverdale, was reported today to be in Clarksburg, W. Va., seeking to divorce her husband, Frank Pauletta, now serving a life sentence in the West Virginia State Prison.

Pauletta was convicted and sentenced to hang for murder in Clarksburg, January 18, 1913. A few days before he was to have been taken to Moundsville for the execution, he escaped.

He was captured by Clarksburg authorities in Coverdale last January after a chase in the dark passages of a mine in which he had worked.

Resentenced to hang on his return to Clarksburg, Pauletta staged a fight against the death penalty. To his aid came civic and church workers, tht Civil Liberties Union and his wife. The fight was carried to Gov. William G. Conley, who commuted the sentence to life imprisonment upon the plea that he had lived an exemplary life since his escape.

SPY MESSAGE IN CIPHER

Now for the great international spy message.

IT MUST be solved.

Can you do it?

Just imagine that the Secretary of War—or, who ever else handles messages of this sort—handed this cipher to you and told you to get busy as the fate of a nation depended upon your speed. You'd roll up your sleeves and get busy.

It's not so easy—even if you know how. But the old brain is certainly due for a work-out after the simple problems of the past few days.

Should you do this one within an evening, let the Cipher Editor know. Those completing the solution within "bogie" of one hour and 17 minutes earn the rating of "expert."

The solution to the "Infantry Message"—Cipher No. 20—is published today. Are you surprised how easy it was? Maybe the new one, too, will prove "soft." But the editor doubts it.

However—get busy.

Just one hint—maybe a frequency table will help. In common usage the letters E, T, A, O, N, I, S, H, R, D, etc., are in the order given, most common. Write the letters of the alphabet vertically, and check those which appear in the cipher. The one which appears most numerously, may be "E," the second most numerous "T," etc.

That should be sufficient hint.

Beginning Saturday the Sun-Telegraph will print original ciphers, submitted by the cipher fans. These will continue all week.

Coal Magnate Wills Estate to Family

CLEVELAND, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—James Alexander Paisley, president of the Valley Camp Coal Company and one of the nation's leading coal magnates, left an estate appraised at $66,200, his will, filed for probate yesterday, indicated.

His estate is to be given to the J. A. Paisley Company, which his daughter, Mrs. Lillian Christian, said was owned by members of the family.

Breadwinner Wife Awarded Divorce

Mrs. Tierney testified her husband considered it unfair for two members of a family to be wage earners.

Solution to Cipher No. 20

He was locked up. The officers said they believed he was demented.

HOSPITAL HEAD ADDS SEAL PLEA

Speaking in behalf of the Christmas Seal campaign for funds to combat tuberculosis, Abraham Oseroff, Montefiore Hospital head and vice president of the Pittsburgh Hospital Conference, said today the funds are more important this winter than ever before. He said:

"This is perhaps the most critical time of all in the widespread battle against the tubercle bacillus, which Dr. Koch isolated in 1882. Our people are impoverished and living in crowded quarters under conditions which, counting malnutrition, contribute to tuberculosis. Our hospitals and their dispensaries are overtaxed, and every social and family welfare agency in the district is at bay seeking ways to relieve distress and prevent serious illness. Under such conditions, the fight against tuberculosis must not be relaxed, and it will be weakened if the sale of Christmas seals fails."

Oseroff said the funds derived from the seal sale must cover approximately half the total cost of operating the Tuberculosis League Hospital throughout the coming year.

Reporting a gain of $2,000, the Christmas seal sale fund had climbed $12,000 today. This leaves the fund short of its quota by $88,000, with only 15 sale days remaining.

BRIDGE STARS VYING HERE

Contract bridge stars from throughout the district today are starting in the Western Pennsylvania Contract Bridge Championship tournament which continues through Saturday night.

Afternoon and night sessions will be held under sponsorship of the American Bridge League under the direction of Russell J. Baldwin. The opening sessions today for mixed contract pair champions are being held in the rooms of the Pittsburgh Bridge Club, William Penn Hotel.

Contract team-of-four championship matches tomorrow and pair championship games Saturday will be held in the sevententh floor Silver Room of the hotel. All afternoon sessions will open at 2 p. m. and night games at 8 o'clock.

The tournament is open to all bridge players of Western Pennsylvania, tournament manager S. F. Gerber said. The contestants need not be members of the local club nor the league. The executive committee is headed by William E. McKenney. E. Hall Downes is chairman of the tournament committee. Mrs. Grace Lear is reception committee chairman.

Crews Set Record On Crossing Work

NEWARK, O., Dec. 8.—A force of 40 B. & O. employes of this city and 40 Pennsylvania Railway employes from Columbus joined here and installed a new 30,000 pound steel frog at the crossover of the two roads. Passenger and freight trains made their runs through here on scheduled time. The work was commenced at 7:30 a. m. and completed at 11:45 a. m., record time for work of this kind.

Follows Granddad As House Speaker

Yantis, Olympia Layer, will be Speaker of the first predominantly Democratic House of Representatives in Washington State. A caucus of Democratic members of the House chose him.

A COLD PASSES THRU 3 STAGES!

It is Twice as Easily Stopped in the First as in the Second or Third Stages!

A cold passes through three stages—the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Once it gets beyond the Dry Stage it is far more difficult to relieve. Therefore, treat a cold promptly.

The best thing you can take is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, because it does the four things necessary, in the way required. It opens the bowels. Kills the germs and fever in the system. Relieves the headache and grippy feeling. Tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

This is the relief you want—complete, thorough and decisive! Trust to nothing less.

Effective as it is, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is absolutely safe to take. No narcotics. No bad after-effects of any kind. Relief with comfort! The whole world knows Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine as the standard cold tablet. Comes in handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. Get it at any drug store. There is nothing "just as good."

Husband Stays Home For Fifty Years

LEEK, England, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—John Robinson, celebrating his golden wedding anniversary, said that keeping peace in the family has been no problem at all—he stays home nights.

For 50 years he has stayed home every night except one. He explained:

"On that one night I sat up with a sick friend."

Cruelty to Clergy Rouses Canon's Ire

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Cruelty to old clergymen is what Canon Best is trying to stamp out. He asked the General Synod of the Anglican Church to reduce the retirement age, which is now 70. He said:

"When a man is 40 he is in his prime. When he is 50 he begins to stagger, when he is 60 he commences to fall down and when he is 70 it is un-Christian and downright inhuman to ask him to carry on."

Ancient Indian Ruins Found by Kane Man

KANE, Pa., Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Evidence pointing to the existence of a forgotten race of red men, believed to have inhabited this section centuries before the discovery of America, has been revealed by J. E. Henretta, historian and archaeologist.

Henretta, a Kane business man, yesterday said he had unearthed ruins of stockade forts, occupied from two to four centuries prior to the westward voyage of Columbus.

Judge Hears Good Yarn, But Jails Man

DETROIT, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—All George Fritch, 42, intended to do when he pulled a fire alarm was to put police on the trail of four robbers who had taken $26 from him, then tied him to a table and forcibly poured a pint of whisky down his throat. At least that was his story, but it fell on incredulous ears in Recorder's Court and he was sentenced to 45 days in the House of Coorrection.

Special Auto Tags Urged for Doctors

HARRISBURG, Dec. 9.—(INS.)—The Dauphin County Medical Society was on record today in favor of special license tags for Pennsylvania physicians in order to end the "red ticket" and arrests for overtime parking by the press of professional duties.

Members contended that plates which could be easily recognized by police might permit the minor traffic violations when necessary. A resolution to the effect was adopted with few dissenting votes.

Auto Registrations In State Decrease

HARRISBURG, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—The Bureau of Motor Vehicles reports automobile registrations last month were 174,541 and receipts $2,182,729, compared with 265,666 and $3,421,807 in November, 1931.

To the end of November, this year's registrations totaled 4,935,879, and receipts reached $29,330,550, as against 5,388,730 registrations and $31,147,274 receipts in a like period last year.

Betty Macdonald, Pittsburgh dancer, whose fame is just now beginning to spread abroad in cities where this art is nurtured, gave a novel recital in the Young Men and Women's Hebrew Association last night, introducing many new dances and some unfamiliar music. This young artist has matured considerably in the interval since her last recital a year ago, and her new creations give promise of still further development.

Mr. Lissfelt

Miss Macdonald draws her inspiration mainly from modern music, perhaps to coincide with the latest conception of dance forms, yet from Bach and Beethoven she has drawn some excellent pictures. Mary Wigman is not far in the distance when we watch Miss Macdonald, yet there is more grace and a more elastic transition from movement to movement with this younger disciple.

Also she seems to have studied Gothic windows and sculpture, for many of her slightly grotesque postures (grotesque in the same light that modern painting and sculpture like to play a little off line) may be found in any of the great French and German cathedrals. She is not without humor, but when she plays comedy it is very delicate and vague enough to hold complete attention.

Lighting and her costumes are helpful, but not intrusive. For contrast, I should like to suggest a slight relief occasionally from the severe stylized forms. Her "Lament" was a magnificent fragment of tragedy, the best work of the evening. Miss Macdonald remains too long, however, in this mood, and even her Giddy Girl and Gamin want still lighter touch.

Bertha Gerson played the difficult accompaniments and contributed some fine piano music during intervals when the dancer was changing costume. A good sign when Griffes appears on a piano program.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Pleurisy Is Related to Other Ills

When I was a young doctor pleurisy was looked upon as a simple and harmless disease.

Dr. Copeland

Most sufferers from it were treated at home with simple remedies. It is probable that patients got well not because of the treatment applied, but because it is a self-limiting disease. By this I mean it is one of those ailments that run a definite course and unless complications set in, clears up by itself.

It is now believed that a positive relationship exists between pleurisy and tuberculosis. Because of this, repeated attacks of pleurisy should serve as warnings of the need of careful medical care and supervision. An individual susceptible to pleurisy is usually susceptible to tuberculosis.

Recent research shows that many cases of mild tuberculosis are neglected, overlooked by reason of the same carelessness which attaches to the treatment of pleurisy. Though these studies are still in the experimental stage, the real meaning of pleurisy cannot be overlooked.

Pleurisy, too, may be a forerunner of pneumonia. It may follow pneumonia. Indeed, it is usually associated with some disturbance of the lung proper.

Pleurisy makes its attack without warning. The victim is suddenly taken ill with a pain in the chest. The pain is made worse by taking a deep breath. It is relieved by restrained breathing. For this reason strapping the chest with adhesive plaster gives great relief.

As its name implies, pleurisy is an inflammation of the pleura, the membrane lining which surrounds the lung. The inflammation is caused by germs which reach the pleura through the lungs or through the blood stream. There are different types of pleurisy, each caused by its own germ.

Sometimes complaint is made of symptoms which resemble, yet may not be pleurisy. I would advise that a person so afflicted consult with his physician and let him determine what is wrong.

Please bear in mind that neglect of the health leads to lowered resistance. Among other ailments, that invites pleurisy. Lack of sleep, excessive fatigue, exposure to cold and dampness, and improper food are a few of the things that must be avoided.

I want to warn you against the danger of home remedies and other home treatment in cases of pleurisy. An attack of pleurisy must be considered as a serious matter. As I have told you it is a menace to health when neglected. It requires trained care.

Ugly yellow vanishes TEETH WHITEN 3 Shades in 3 days

If you think yellow, stained, unsightly-looking teeth are natural, start using Kolynos—a half-inch of this amazing dental cream on a dry brush twice daily. In 3 days you'll see your mistake. Your teeth will look 3 shades whiter!

Kolynos—unlike any preparation you've ever used—contains two important ingredients that clean and whiten teeth remarkably. One—the finest cleansing agent known—erases stain and tartar, foams into every tiny fissure and washes away decay-causing debris. While the other ingredient kills the millions of germs that cause most tooth and gum troubles and helps to make teeth absolutely clean.

"ME—I like to drive around 30-miles-an-hour. But I want my oil to be that 100-mile-an-hour oil—Gulf Supreme!

"Why? It's as simple as ABC. The oil that can take the punishment of 100-miles-an-hour is a better oil! It's a better oil at ANY speed—from 10 to 80!

"It gives you more of what every oil should have. Extra richness . . . extra protection against wear . . . extra stamina!"

Gulf Supreme has proved its amazing "fighting qualities" in two of the stiffest tests an oil could get . . .

And it amazed racing drivers by outperforming special "racing oils" at the Indianapolis Speedway! In a torpedo-like Duesenberg racer, it circled the track at speeds almost as great as two miles a minute! Under Official AAA supervision, it made an average speed for this one-hour non-stop run greater than 100-miles-an-hour!

Start now to use Gulf Supreme. Because it can take super-punishment, it will save you money, minimize repairs, and lengthen the life of your motor!

WARNING! . . . OIL that isn't good at high speeds, isn't good enough at ANY speed!

Some Men Use Poor Excuses For Their Foolishness

He just can't let wild women alone!
But is it because he likes 'em?
No, indeedy! Listen to his alibi:

Dear Sally:

I read your column every day, and I think your advice is wonderful, so won't you please give me some? I am in deep trouble, and I don't know what to do.

I am 24 years old and have been married for five years. I have a dear little boy 2½ years old. Before my husband and I were married he and another man had a fight, and he got stabbed. The other man liked me, so my husband blamed me for the fight; but after a short time we made up, and we agreed never to bring up the past.

So we were married, and for two years we were happy. Then I found out he was having affairs with other women. For the last three years it has been one woman after another. I have seen him in our car with his arms around them. He has also taken them to dances—dances I was at—and left me to get home the best way I could.

All my friends are talking about it, and I am so ashamed and heart-broken that I hate to go where they are.

Now he owns up that he hasn't treated me right; but says he is doing this way to get even with me because he got hurt before we were married!

In spite of all this I do love him; but could he ever have loved me when he acts this way, and, above all, when he nags me about the past, which we promised to forget?

PLEADS WITH HIM

I love him dearly and I plead with him to leave other women alone, but he tells me that if I don't like what he is doing, to get me somebody else. My friends say I am a fool to let him put it over on me this way, too.

What shall I do? Shall I give him some of his own medicine? I can. I am not bad-looking. I am tall and slender, and I know how to dress.

Please help me. I am sorry for that old trouble, and I have tried to do everything I could to make him happy. I am so anxious and so wretched, I don't know what to do.

BARBARA.

Shall you "give him some of his own medicine?"

No, youngster. Why wallow, just because he does? Why destroy your self-respect, just because he hasn't any? For that's what ails him.

A WEAK ALIBI

He isn't chasing around to "get even" with you. That's just a cheap alibi. He's chasing around because he likes it, and because he has never learned how to be a Regular.

Your going out to "go him one better" wouldn't mean a thing. It would just get YOU in bad, and leave him free to do as he pleases.

Then what'll you do?

Stop being a worm. Stop blaming yourself for the kind of man he's turned out to be. Tell him where to get off.

Tell him, quietly and calmly, that you've done your part to make your marriage a success, and that if he isn't man enough to do his part and give you a square break, you're through—until he is.

Say that if he's willing to straighten up, stop acting like a spoiled two-year-old and begin to act like a decent husband and father, YOU'LL STICK, and be as interesting and as good a pal as you can.

But don't "plead" with him; and don't stand for any more of his foolishness.

Fay King Commends Worthy Charities for Support of All

By FAY KING.

Although I have used only the Christmas Seal in my cartoon, it is only one of the many worthy appeals that come at this time of the year.

The Red Cross, the Salvation Army, the Volunteers of America, Christmas Funds, and many others, too numerous to list, do much good and are so worthy of consideration.

In every church there is a box for contributions to the poor and whatever you can spare is welcome.

In responding to these appeals some can give a dollar, where others can give only a dime. Many can only spare a few pennies. But every little bit helps.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Ronald Tells of His Last Quarrel With Marion

My eyes followed Lillian's pointing finger to the sky directly over the hotel, where a silver-corded plane was swooping down toward us from some unknown height above. When it seemed almost certain that it would ultimately crash, it suddenly straightened out and twice circled over that part of the village that included the hotel and the school. Then it zoomed away in the direction of the road which Lillian and I had searched that morning.

"Don't wave or show any recognition," Lillian had whispered immediately after her low-toned exclamation that Dicky was on the job, but although there was no sign from the man guiding the plane, I was sure that he had seen us, and I sent all my heart after him as he disappeared in the distance.

"There's no mistaking the Dicky-bird's style of flying," Lillian said, but so low was her voice and so casual her air that no bystander would have guessed she had any interest in the flier, beyond the thrill that I believe comes to almost every one at seeing a "silver bird skim the clouds."

"Where's he going to report progess?" Lillian asked briskly, unerringly seizing the best method of calming me by giving me a question to answer.

"I don't know," I returned. "He didn't say anything except that he could do better work in another branch of the service."

LILLIAN SWOONS

"Playing a lone hand, eh?" Then she stopped and looked at me curiously. "Hugh's doing the same thing, isn't he? Wonder if they're— Well! There aren't two men anywhere with fitter bodies, keener minds or more dauntless courage than Hugh and the Dicky-bird. They ought to find the girls, if anybody can."

Her face worked suddenly and grew so ashen that I feared she would fall. But her husband's powerful hand was under her elbow in an instant, his body shielding her from any curious gaze. The next moment she stood erect and spoke calmly.

"I'm perfectly all right. I'm going to lie down until you come over with news. So long!"

She turned and walked with steady step beside her big husband into the hotel. Ronald spoke softly as they disappeared into the hall.

"There will be no girls outside the school grounds at this hour. I'm going to take you down within a block of the school, then you can walk the rest of the way. You must be terribly tired."

He is the most chivalrous lad I know, and I knew that his concern was genuine. But I also was sure that he craved speech alone with me, because I had known more than anyone else about his troubled, youthful romance with Marion. And he spoke tensely.

"Do you have to get back right away? Couldn't we drive five or ten minutes first? I want to talk to you."

RECALLS LAST REMARK

"For 10 minutes, yes," I replied promptly. "It would take me that long to reach the school. If you have me back within a block from there in 12 minutes, I can drive around with you."

"I've just got to talk to somebody," he said, "and you know more about—us—than anybody else does. I'm going crazy, I think, because of things I said to Marion when I saw her last."

He did not expect an answer or a comment. I saw that, and sat silent but alert, watching his hands clutch the wheel.

"You know you asked me to pretend that game with Mary so that Marion would be—cured—of whatever she felt for—that old Owen."

"Yes." I uttered no word beyond the monosyllable. Not yet was it time to speak of what I knew to be Marion's real feeling toward Owen.

"Well! I went through with it, and then that evening at the dinner dance I played up just as you asked me, and pretended to be absolutely devoted to Marion again. But—when it was all over, and Avis Arlen had gone home, and Marion and I were alone, she—she—tried to apologize to me, and I told her—I told her that I hoped I'd never see her again as long as I lived. Oh, God! Do you suppose that wish is coming true?"

Contract Bridge

-:- How to Play -:- How to Win

By Josephine Culbertson

Making a Hopeless Contract

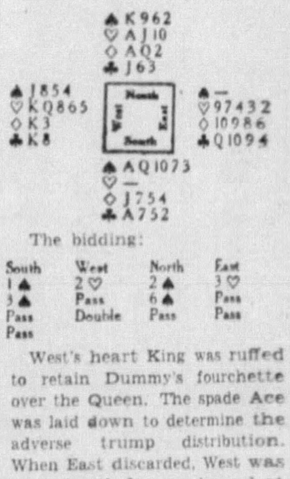
After the bidding is over and the Dummy is spread on the table, the Declarer frequently has cause to rue his over-optimism in the bidding because he can see he is confronted with what appears to be an impossible contract, due to over-enthusiasm in the bidding. Such a situation apparently confronted Mr. J. A. Taylor, of Youngstown, O., in the play of the hand below:

South—Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | 2 ♡ | 2 ♠ | 3 ♡ |
| 3 ♠ | Pass | 6 ♠ | Pass |
| Pass | Double | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

West's heart King was ruffed to retain Dummy's fourchette over the Queen. The spade Ace was laid down to determine the adverse trump distribution. When East discarded, West was marked with four spades and at least five hearts. For his vulnerable Overcall, he would require a five-card suit as well as an outside honor-trick. This outside honor-trick could be the King of diamonds and the King of clubs or the club King-Queen. There was no hope of making the contract unless West could be thrown in and forced to lead a heart.

In planning for this, it was necessary to assume a certain distribution. Thus West must have either King-small of diamonds and King-small of clubs, or King-small of diamonds and King-Queen of clubs. With the second combination, he could not escape from the end-play, but with the first he could and probably would exit unless he could be surprised into making a mechanical play. To Trick 3, therefore, Mr. Taylor led the Ace of clubs, and things looked bright when West played the 8. He should have unblocked by playing the King. From this point on, the elimination was followed as planned, West being thrown in at Trick 9 with the club King, with only hearts remaining to lead, and now East, who had retained two diamonds and the Queen-Ten of clubs, was squeezed. He was forced to make two discards, and his position was hopeless, South's diamonds winning the last 2 tricks.

The fault of over-enthusiastic bidding had been rectified by flawless play later.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Why do you not advocate the lead of one's best card when leading partner's suit?

Answer—If the Ace of partner's suit is held against a suit contract, it should be led, so that the Declarer cannot make a singleton King. However, with other honors, it is usually advisable to lead low in order to retain an entry in the hand and also to prevent partner from being squeezed.

Against a notrump contract, it is desirable to retain a high card in order to reduce the number of stoppers held by the Declarer. For example: If you hold Q x x of your partner's suit and have the Opening lead against a notrump contract, your partner holds the Ace, and the Declarer the guarded King-Knave, you can readily see that the lead of the low card is very advantageous. In other words, if you lead the Queen, the Declarer definitely has two stoppers. However, if you lead low and your partner takes with the Ace and returns a low card of the suit, the Declarer can stop the suit but once, taking 1 trick instead of 2.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Engagement Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Two middle aged people who have both been divorced wish to give an informal party for the purpose of making known to their friends their intention to marry. Is it best to have or to ask some intimate friend to give the party for these two, or could the couple give the tea themselves and have a friend announce the engagement?

Which is the more delicate method of procedure for this couple considering the circumstance?

If a friend gives the tea should she invite the guests whose names would be supplied by the engaged couple, even though the friend knows only a few of the guests to be invited? E.

I like so much better the plan of having the couple give their own party at which they will make known their engagement. This would be a very gracious and dignified thing to do, and could be made a most charming occasion.

I take it for granted that the party would be given in the home of the fiancee. If so, then a perfect way of announcing the engagement would be for the fiancee to stand near the entrance of the room in which her guests would enter, and her fiance next to her. As she greeted her guests, she might say, as she turned to her fiance, "Mary, may I present my fiance?" She might, I mean, use this as the form for both those who know her fiance and those who don't. In the first group, the introduction might be done in a merry manner, as if to say, "I know I don't have to present Mr. Thompson (or 'Bob', if the guest calls him by his first name) but I do want to present my fiance."

This way of making known the engagement would, to my taste, be more gracious than having the party given by a friend who doesn't know many of the friends of the couple.

Listening In— Christopher Morley And Don Marquis Make Radio Bow

A celebrated group of writers, theatrical personages and explorers will be brought to the microphone in a series of weekly interviews on that Home Circle program beginning Saturday. Replacing Arthur B. Reeve, the first three speakers will be Christopher Morley, Don Marquis and George Chappell . . . Don Bestor has written a new ballad, "Two Empty Arms" . . . He's playing it nightly at the Hotel Lexington's Silver Grill.

Mr. Morley

Those adventure stories Floyd Gibbons tells each week are really taken from real life. The story of a Negro boy who killed two sharks won for that much-surprised youngster a $600 watch.

Dick Teela, featured vocalist with Harold Stokes' Orchestra, sang in a choir, drove a milk wagon, drove a hearse, won the Wisconsin Atwater Kent auditions and worked as a golf pro—all before he was 20.

Duke Ellington and Doc Payton bring their orchestras to Pittsburgh for the Anatole Club's Christmas Ball, to be held at the Hotel Schenley December 25, with dancing beginning at midnight.

Jack Pearl . . . wavy black hair, brown eyes, 5 feet 7 inches tall, 150 pounds . . . has made an intense study of comedy; makes faces before a mirror each morning to keep those muscles in trim . . . an ardent admirer of David Warfield . . . very superstitious—carries wood in every pocket . . . pet name for his wife is "Pugey" . . . she calls him "Doll" . . . likes to read the classics . . . has read Dickens' "David Copperfield" no less than seven times.

About the Vass Family, the latest addition to NBC's list of family radio acts: They really come from the South (South Carolina) and had no intention of becoming professional . . . It all rather bewilders Dr. J. L. Vass, head of the family, lecturer on educational subjects and former professor of history at Furman University, Greenville, S. C. They broadcast each Saturday at 10 a. m. over WCAE.

Jack Pearl says that the imagination of listeners must be stirred by a definite illusion to take the place of what the audience sees in the theater—hence the illusionary character, Baron Munchausen.

Another big oil company is said to be planning a program to compete with Ed Wynn and the Marx brothers . . . Joe Cook, one of the few important comedians who hasn't been signed for the microphone, is due back on the Broadway stage soon . . . Wonder . . .

NBC announcers are a versatile group. Witness recent programs by NBC staff members in New York: Ted Jewett did an imitation of Dr. Damrosch . . . John Holbrook read one of Kipling's poems in authentic London cockney . . . Howard Petrie, radio's tallest announcer at 6 feet 4, sang a bass solo . . . and Kelvin Keech, who made his debut over 2LO, the BBC station in London, played the ukulele and sang in native Hawaiian.

Robison Whistles 2 Notes at Once

Carson Robison, the prairie song exponent, demonstrates his unique ability at whistling a duet, producing two notes simultaneously, when he present his own composition, "Tree Top Serenade," at 7:30 tonight on WCAE.

Schramm Returns To Air Tonight

Marty Schramm, who has been ill for several weeks, returns to the air with his orchestra on WJAS at 6:40 tonight.

Air Parade Salutes Grove City

Inaugurating its new Thursday night at 7:30 schedule, the Westinghouse Band salutes Grove City on KDKA.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello Ladies and Gentlemen:

When I started this "battle of a century" with Knockout Influenza I was a good-sized lightweight, hitting the scales at 133 pounds. Now as round four comes up, my second, the doctor, has me six pounds lighter than a straw hat. But I found out something—my opponent can't take it. A straight left with a pill took a lot of fight out of him. Round three was even, with neither of us showing any quarter and the temperature held at 99.

* * *

Never let it be said the Globe Trotter couldn't take a dare. (Be reasonable now). Elma Fowlkes emulates the feat of possession (is there such a thing?) maintained by Lillie Rudolph. Elma says she has a Philadelphia paper dated March 25, 1836. Would you be so kind as to send me the radio section?

* * *

Believe it or not (nothing like being original), I'm beginning to like the fog. Its thoroughness brings forth another bit of information. J. M. W. contributes the fact that when valued photographs become soiled from exposure to dust and fog, they can be washed in warm water with a soft cloth and soap; rinsed under a cold water spigot and placed again upright in the folder to dry.

* * *

Can it be that my veracity is being questioned? (Say it isn't so—with the special permission of the copyright owners). Again let me state (and this time in black and white), Mrs. B. E. S., that Uncle Sam will deliver your Christmas cards for one and a half cents per card if the flap is not sealed, and it makes no difference whether the address is printed or written.

* * *

By the way, where, how or when did the United States get the title of Uncle Sam? And while we're at it, how come John Bull for England?

* * *

Compliments — nothing but compliments. Another letter comes in, quite agreeing with my first correspondent that "Globe-Trotting" is simply balderdash. (Do I take my bow now?)

* * *

Since Christmas is just around the corner, like prosperity, can it be that they are acquainted and will come strolling around together?

* * *

With all the parenthetical lines in today's column, we ask you not to confuse us with Eugene O'Neill. This is not an excerpt from "Strange Interlude" nor are we Clark Gable.

Radcliffe Trustee WCAE Speaker

Mrs. George Pierce Baker, a graduate, trustee and former acting dean of Radcliffe College, tells of the romance and struggles surrounding the growth of that institution when she appears as guest speaker on the Women's Radio Review over NBC-WCAE at 3:30 today.

Baron Munchausen Turns Engineer

Jack Pearl, alias the Baron Munchausen, the only living person capable of coping with the gigantic construction projects of his fancy, discusses modern engineering enterprises over WCAE at 10 tonight. Abe Lyman and his band provide the rhythms.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

FOOD 'CHARGED' AT THEATER TO HELP COX

The several outlying Warner theaters in the immediate Pittsburgh area have set aside Saturday for morning matinees at which only packages and cans of food will be accepted for admission. In each of these theaters a complete talking picture program will be put on. The food supplies obtained in this manner will be given to the relief agencies in these neighborhoods.

As there are three Warner theaters in the East Liberty district, the food donations brought to one of them—the Sheridan Square—will be turned over to Father Cox. The talking picture at the Sheridan Square, arranged for by Manager Hooley, will be Will Rogers in "Ambassador Bill" and there also will be news reels, comedies and short special films. Friends of Father Cox will consequently rally around the Sheridan Square Saturday morning.

Everyone is invited, but it is requested that they do not bring perishable foods. Canned and package goods will be appreciated, particularly bacon, coffee, sugar and flour.

Let's make it a big morning matinee for Father Cox, but don't neglect the benefit matinee in other Warner theaters. They are all particularly worthy at this time and the Warner management is getting many expressions of praise for putting them on.

PIERCE ARROW and AMOCO SHATTER WORLD MARKS!

NOT long ago on the salt beds at Salduro, Utah, Ab Jenkins, famous Pierce Arrow racing driver, surpassed all performance marks. In a Pierce Arrow "12" stock roadster, Jenkins drove 2710 miles in twenty-four hours for an average of 112.91 miles an hour. Ab Jenkins never left his seat. His only stops were for refueling.

Amoco-Gas was the only motor fuel used. Ab Jenkins, a user of Amoco for years, was so insistent on Amoco-Gas for this demonstration that, at the request of the Pierce Arrow factory, The American Oil Company shipped his supply of Amoco-Gas all the way to Salduro, Utah.

Ab Jenkins had to have a motor fuel that was all net power; that was easy on his motor and easy on him. Only Amoco-Gas would do. The answer is in his new world marks—2710 miles in twenty-four hours for an average of 112.91 miles an hour.

An unbeatable pair—a Pierce Arrow motor and Amoco-Gas—the original special motor fuel. For endurance, power and smoothness, both have no equal.

Sand blasting will not be included in the approved methods of outside cleaning. Pointing of the masonry will be advertised separately. Sprigle is preparing data on the present cost of cleaning the offices to learn whether there would be economy in contracting for the work.

Approach of Wedding Date Brings Happiness To Girl in New Serial

CHAPTER I

Mary Faith was burning her bridges. For three years, almost four, she had been waiting to burn them. Waiting to give up her room at Mrs. Puckett's family hotel in River street. Waiting to tell Mr. Mark Nesbit, the head of the Nesbit Mercantile Company, that she was planning to give up her position as his private secretary just as soon as he could fill her place. Waiting to let her small world know that she was going to marry Kim Farrell at last.

For three years, almost four, she had been engaged to marry Kim Farrell.

For three years she had worn his modest diamond on the third finger of her left hand, and had spent part of every lunch hour embroidering guest towels and table runners for the home that would be Kim's and hers some day.

"If you don't get married pretty soon," Jean Bartlett, the head stenographer at Nesbit's, had said to her less than a week before, "you'll own enough hand embroidered linens to start a shop! I don't believe in these long engagements myself. There should be a law against them . . . Too many girls find themselves disappointed old maids at the end of them instead of blushing brides!"

Mary Faith had not answered her. She had only looked at her with clear, untroubled eyes and smiled. She had no doubts about Kim Farrell. He loved her just as she loved him. And so she was willing to wait for him.

And then late last night, as if to justify her faith in him, Kim had suddenly turned to her in the lamplit dimness of Mrs. Puckett's old-fashioned parlor and asked her when she would marry him.

"Why—in about two weeks, I think," she had answered him as soon as she could get her breath. "You see, I'll have to tell Mr. Nesbit I'm leaving, and it will take me a few days to break his new secretary in to do my work . . . Kim, to think of us really getting married in two weeks! Why I never knew anyone could be so happy as I am right this minute!"

Long afterward it came back to her that he had said nothing about his own happiness that night.

At breakfast she had told Mrs. Puckett that she was going to be married on the first of October.

At noon she had broken the news to Jean Bartlett, who was half expecting to step into her shoes at the office.

It was half past five in the afternoon now, and Mary Faith was standing at the door of Mr. Mark Nesbit's private office.

She had something for him to sign in one hand and the door knob in the other . . . It was going to be hard to open that door and walk into the office to tell him she was leaving Nesbit's at the end of the month.

LIKES HER WORK

She had worked for him for four years—one year as a stenographer and three years as his private secretary. The place itself was like home to her. She had come to love the big, shabby offices with their cork-covered floors, their green-shaded lights and their high, narrow windows that faced the west.

The people who worked in them were her friends—all of them, from Jean Bartlett down to Stanley Odeskalki, the office boy. There was not one of them whom she was not going to miss in the new life that lay just ahead of her.

With a keen little sigh she turned the door knob and stepped into Mr. Mark Nesbit's office. He was standing with his back to the room, looking down into the parking space at the side of the building and fidgeting with the window shade.

At the sound of the door closing he swung round and met Mary Faith's eyes. Her deep steady eyes were like Mary Faith herself, somehow. You could not look into them without seeing that you could bank on her always for honesty and goodness.

TELLS EMPLOYER

They were dark blue, fringed with heavy lashes, and they would have given a certain beauty to even a plain woman. But Mary Faith was not plain. Health glowed in her cheeks and lips with a rose-red flame that left the rest of her face to the dusky whiteness of her skin, to the blackness of her brows and lashes. Her dark hair swept up from a widow's peak on her forehead and her lips, when she smiled, had the tilt of flying wings.

She was not smiling now. Serious and silent, moving like a breath, she came across the thick carpet of the office and laid her letters down upon Mr. Nesbit's glass-topped desk.

"I can mail these on my way home, Mr. Nesbit," she said quietly as she stood beside his chair, watching him sign his name to them one by one.

He had nice, clever-looking hands, she thought, watching them move across the papers in front of him. She had always liked his nice, homely face, his dark quick glance, his firm, pleasant way of giving orders.

She knew that he was a bachelor and that he was only 34 years old. She knew, too, that he was making a tremendous success of the business that had been left to him by his father.

But neither his money nor his attractive bachelorhood had ever had any power to stir Mary Faith. For she had met Kim Farrell just a little while after

P. S. C. PROBERS RUSH APPEAL ON WRITS

Committee Launches Offensive in Inquiry

By JOSEPH A. LOFTUS
International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 8.—The Senate investigating committee threw out a stern declaration of battle today and decided definitely to take the offensive in its contest with utilities and affiliates of the Public Service Commission.

Its hands virtually tied by injunctions, the committee, at an executive session, took a determined step to throw off the shackles and ordered an appeal taken directly to the State Supreme Court from one restraining order which "freezes" its finances.

CASE LISTED

The appeal was filed with the judiciary's prothonotary here and the case automatically was listed for the May term. Counsel, however, left immediately for Philadelphia to ask the high court for an immediate hearing. Attorneys J. Julius Levy and J. Cullen Ganey were delegated to present the request.

The injunction selected for immediate bombardment was that obtained by Ira Jewell Williams, Philadelphia, in a taxpayer's suit. It is listed for argument in Dauphin County Court next Tuesday, the order being only temporary at present. The appeal ignores possible results of the argument for and against a permanent injunction by the County Court and is intended to hasten a decision which can be superseded.

At the same time the committee directed counsel to appear tomorrow in Uniontown for argument on the injunction obtained by Commissioner S. Ray Shelby restraining it from obtaining his bank records from the Second National Bank of Uniontown.

IMPORTANT CASES

The committee decided that these two cases are the most important among the pending litigation. In the event the court decides the probers are without authority to spend any part of their appropriation or to subpena the bank records of former and present commissioners, much of their work cannot be completed.

Oliver K. Eaton, chief of the committee's counsel, was directed further to ask the local court next week to postpone again argument on the other pending injunctions.

These restraints were obtained by James S. Benn, Philadelphia, a former Commissioner, and the Pennsylvania subsidiaries of the Associated Gas and Electric system. They challenge the committee's legality because it was authorized at a special session of the Legislature, its right to summon company records, and also raises the question that the committee lacks a quorum, since the terms of Senators Coyne, Earnest, Clippinger and Rial have expired.

KIN OF SLEUTH DRY VIOLATOR

Jack Fromme, of 1605 Fifth avenue, pleaded guilty today to a dry law violation and was sentenced to 90 days in jail by Judge Frank P. Patterson.

County Detective Frank Ritz testified he had raided the Fifth avenue address September 16 and found a 10-foot bar on the second floor, together with whisky and beer.

Fromme explained he was a violinist and was running a club for musicians.

Judge Patterson, informed by Fromme that his brother was a city detective, said to him:

"You should have known better than to try to operate a club."

NO CITY AUTOS FOR MRS. RAUH

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the City Department of Welfare, today pointed out that she was one city official who never used a city-owned automobile for either public or private pusposes. She made her comment following the revelation that a large part of the annual bill for city automobile purchase and maintenance could be slashed if city officials relinquished city-owned machines or used them only for public business.

Mrs. Rauh says she never was offered a machine by city authorities. Other department heads, it was pointed out, use the city-owned machines as means of conveyance to and from their homes and are even provided chauffeur service. Council President John S. Herron, it was pointed out, commutes to his Homewood residence in a city-owned, chauffeured machine.

Uncle Samuel's All Set to Show He Can 'Take It'

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Europe can afford to pay. But can America afford to accept?

There's a statement that is as amazing as gold leaf on flivver fenders.

Read that first line over and you will find a stowaway in the kindling wood.

It was made by a European financier and diplomat. Speech was invented to disguise thoughts. And the old boy certainly put a long pair of false whiskers on that one.

That line is a threat in tabloid form. It contains precipitate moisture of tariff reprisals and trade shackles.

The answer is that we can afford to accept. After me, the deluge, as the frog said when he went over Niagara Falls.

Yes sir, Uncle Sam can take it. Don't forget that the hand that rocks the world is also the mitt that slaps the baby.

'NON-FIX' TAGS DUE SOON

The city's new "non-fixable" traffic violation tags will be in use by Monday or Tuesday.

This promise, made yesterday to Council by Director of Public Safety James M. Clark, came as the result of a protest by the Pittsburgh Garage Association, represented by William Fisher, president.

Fisher charged the city parking ordinance is not being properly enforced and that 70 per cent of all automobiles are parked in the streets.

When called before Council and asked why the new tag system has not been installed Clark said J. Scott Morgan, traffic magistrate, had told him that to install the new system would require the rearranging of Morgan's office. Asked if the parking ordinance would be enforced, Clark said:

"It will be enforced. You can't help but enforce this. These new tags are non-fixable."

Agnes Page Ferich, 22, alias "the platinum blonde," was under arrest on a perjury charge, having been taken into custody upon leaving the witness stand in the trial of Harry Reitzell, of Buena Vista street, North Side, accused of violating the Mann act.

Judge R. M. Gibson directed that the woman be detained. The charge was made before the United States Commissioner and she was committed to jail in default of $5,000 bond pending a hearing.

Miss Ferich, called as a government witness by Assistant United States Attorney Zeno Fritz, testified she did not know the defendant.

RECOUNT BOARD FINDS FRAUD IN COUNTY

Bar Association and County to Join in Prosecutions

Twing Brooks, Democrat, was declared winner in his contest with Congressman Edmund F. Erk, Republican, in the Thirtieth Congressional District, when the Returning Board Judges, W. H. McNaugher and John P. Egan, certified the result of the November election to the Prothonotary today. The vote was: Brooks, 35,186; Erk, 35,045.

The official tabulation gave Brooks the office by a margin of 141 votes. His victory was one of three congressional fights won by Democrats in a county which for years has had five Republican Congressmen, and was achieved on the wave that toppled normal Republican majorities and resulted in Franklin D. Roosevelt getting a plurality of 37,513 over Herbert Hoover in Allegheny County. The presidential vote was Roosevelt, 189,839; Hoover, 152,326, according to returning board figures.

DAVIS LOSES COUNTY

Senator James J. Davis lost his home county for United States Senator to Lawrence H. Rupp, Democrat, 171,187 to 151,386.

William Van Essen, Socialist candidate for United States Senator, polled his party's high vote here, 16,861. Dr. Edwin J. Fithian, of Grove City, the Prohibitionist senatorial candidate, polled 12,872. Republican state officers and Republican Supreme and Superior Court judicial candidates carried the county by narrow margins. The extent of the Democratic slide was evident in the congressional contests where three Republican incumbents, Erk, Estep and Campbell, went down to defeat along with several Republican legislative candidates.

FRAUD REVEALED

Evidence of fraud, it is said, was revealed by the recount board, working in conjunction with the returning board.

Three agencies working on alleged election fraud, will co-operate in massing evidence revealed in the recount, and other evidence that may be dug up.

Attorney E. Lowry Humes and his Bar Association committee met yesterday with County Solicitors J. P. Fife and Ralph Frank, and Maj. W. T. Rees, of the County Elections Bureau, and discussed plans for rounding up election law violators. Later Humes conferred with the County Commissioners.

Humes also conferred with United States Attorney Louis E. Graham, who reported that he had assigned Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh to handle election fraud cases.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park also has stated he will offer full co-operation to any individual or group presenting complaints.

Desano, police reported, fled from the Hans Wagner-Pie Traynor sporting goods store, 713 Liberty avenue, with a sweater snatched from the counter. As Desano fled into Eighth street, Cornerman Samuel Caughey fired three shots. Desano fled through Exchange way to Ninth street and Liberty avenue, where Patrolman Cyril Letzkus fired, the bullet striking the pavement, riccochting through the street car window and striking the motorman. Desano was captured by Letzkus.

Desano admitted the theft and said he wanted to sell the sweater to buy food.

TAXI COMPANY BARES LOSSES

Operators of Yellow and Green taxicabs lost $16,000 a month for 11 months, Edward F. Kram, secretary and treasurer of the Pittsburgh Transportation Company, testified today before Public Service Examiner Garfield Phillips in the hearing today on the city's complain against high existing rates.

Present rates, according to the city's complaint are "unreasonable and unjust." Kram testified that the loss from October, 1931, until last September was $167,000. During that period, he explained, the cab rate was 15 cents for the first one-sixth mile and 10 cents for each additional two-third mile, with 10 cents for each additional passenger. Last August the company petitioned for a return of the old rate of 25 cents for the first one-quarter mile and 10 cents for each additional one-half mile, with no charge for extra passengers. The rate went into effect September 27 and the following day the city filed its complaint.

FIRST ATTORNEY ACCUSED SEES VINDICATION

The disbarment of many more Allegheny County attorneys will be asked in petitions of the Bar Association, investigating "ambulance chasing" practices, within the next few days, members of the investigating committee indicated today.

The first ouster was asked yesterday when the bar association's committee, which for weeks has been at work on the investigation, requested in a petition to disbar Attorney David S. Keilly.

Keilly was accused in the petition of seeking out persons who suffered injuries or damages and persuading them to bring their claims or causes to offices of attorneys suggested by "runners."

Judge Harry H. Rowand granted a rule on Keilly to show cause why he should not be removed from office as an attorney. The rule is returnable in 20 days after notice.

Keilly said he planned an early reply. He declared:

"The petition of the bar association is most astounding to me. The committee's careless disregard of the facts is best evidenced by the fact that I am charged with a settlement of a case and the withholding of funds in an instance in which I was not even representing the claimant.

"Inasmuch as the matter has developed into a judicial proceeding that will require court adjudication, I will meet all the issues raised in the proceeding, and will, I believe, be able to fully vindicate and justify my conduct in every instance complained of by the committee."

The petition cited 31 cases, giving the names of the plaintiffs and naming alleged "runners" who were allegedly compensated by Keilly.

Committee members said other petitions would be filed as soon as the individual cases were completed.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—United States Senator James J. Davis submitted to the elections bureau today the vouchers covering his general election expenses of $1,589.

With the vouchers, Frank K. Boal, secretary to Davis, brought a United States Senate subpena requiring Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, to return the papers to Washington when called upon to do so.

Beamish Monday rejected the previous account filed by Davis, announcing it would not be accepted until the vouchers for all items of more than $10 were received.

The secretary asked also whether Davis' note that a $2,500 contribution had been requested by the Republican state committee represented an "acknowledgement of a debt or merely a notation of a request."

Davis today said the amount is "merely a notation of a request from the state committee, not a direct promise or a demand." He added:

"As soon as my finances warrant, I am going to make the contribution."

The Soviet ambassador, in disclaiming government responsibility for the objectionable articles, was said to have refrained from stressing agreement with their substance.

The Izvestia article accused the British intelligence service of having instructed its agents in Riga, Latvia, to obtain documents, "real or bogus," establishing a relationship between the Soviet government and the Communist Third Internationale. This was linked with British claims of evidence that the Third Internationale directed the recent hunger march on London and was working against the British rule in India.

Indian Attendant Is Slain After Death of Famed White Elephant

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The albino from Katha made an instantaneous hit in London. Layman and scientist came and applauded, the latter remaining to study. Yes, more than one British zoologist spent days in Pa Wa's quarters studying the Burmese freak.

Enter, at this point, John Ringling, famous American showman and head of the combined Barnum and Bailey-Ringling Brothers Circus. Scene: The London Zoo. Time: About five years ago.

Mr. Ringling, a visitor in London, hears about Pa Wa. Instantly there revives in him an ancient ambition, the hope of all showmen since the first circus tent was pitched. This ambition was, of course, to bring that white elephant back to America with him.

I don't suppose it would have made any difference to Mr. Ringling if he had known that he was tackling a job at which P. T. Barnum had failed. All of the latter's resources—consisting of scads of money and limitless ingenuity—had availed him nothing when he tackled the job of bringing a white elephant out of Asia. When Mr. Ringling wants a thing he goes after it. The possibility of failure is the least of his concerns.

Mr. Ringling startled the circus world—and perhaps also himself, for he must have had misgivings when he tackled the London Zoological Society, which is more concerned with science than with the show business—by closing a deal permitting him to borrow Pa Wa for a season and exhibit the famous albino in America. I'd give something to know just what technique the well-known showman employed in consummating that epic transaction.

RINGLING SUCCESSFUL

All kinds of objections had to be overcome. In the first place, the animal was not the property of the London Zoological Society. It was necessary for the zoo heads to turn once more to the British colonial officials and get these men, who had performed one miracle of diplomacy in getting Pa Wa out of Burma without bloodshed, to tackle the owners of the sacred beast again and get them to consent to its shipment to America at a time when influential Burmese were clamoring for its return to Rangoon. Somehow this second miracle of diplomacy was performed.

Just what particular brand of persuasion Mr. Ringling employed I don't know, but it worked—and I've never stopped marveling at it. Perhaps the showman presented a harrowing picture of a freak-starved America that could be revived only by the sight of a white elephant. I doubt if anyone will ever know. Mr. Ringling is too astute to tell how he foxed the English—in case he did.

Old P. T. Barnum, in his home in another world, must have turned green with envy over the announcement of Ringling's feat. And when Pa Wa arrived in America to take its place as a stellar attraction with the Barnum & Bailey-Ringling Bros. Show, Phineas must have sighed for the diplomatic talents that had been given another. Or, remembering that the name of Barnum still graces the posters of The Greatest Show on Earth, perhaps the king of showmen of a vanished era swelled with pride and said, "I knew we'd put it over some day."

ATTENDANTS WORRIED

Pa Wa was exhibited in America and made a big hit. Displayed on a huge platform canopied by a great expanse of gorgeous dark red velvet and glittering gold lace, the pride of Burma looked its regal best for the eager crowds that came to pay and see.

The Barnum & Bailey-Ringling Bros. circus with Pa Wa billed all over the place in sock-you-smack-you-in-the-eye posters, was showing in San Francisco when I arrived in that port from Calcutta—I believe it was in the spring of 1927—with a big shipment of animals, reptiles and birds.

My business concluded and my specimens on their way to their various destinations, I decided to have a look at Pa Wa and a word with Me Wai.

My conversation with the Shan States boy revealed that the white elephant's attendants were beginning to worry about the return home. Their American engagement would be over before long and then there would be the tough assignment of going back to Burma and facing the music. The two that were most badly scared, he said, were Said Ali and Sandy Wee. For they realized that as trainer and driver their services had exceeded in importance those of the other members of the contingent, who were mere flunkeys.

Me Wai tried to reassure them by insisting that if any cure had been in store for them it would have been visited upon them long before. But Said Ali and Sandy Wee, not to be consoled, announced that they would not return to Burma. It would be too dangerous, they felt, now that they viewed the whole matter in the cold light of reason. No, they would seek employment in London, where the mighty England would protect them.

I remember wondering casually what type of employment they could hope to find in London, with only the most fragmentary command of the English language, and no training for the industrial life of the British capital. But I shrugged my shoulders and dismissed the matter from my mind.

That is all I knew about Pa Wa & Co. until long afterwards I heard, in the course of my travels, of the death of the celebrated white elephant. The animal, on its way back to Burma, had died suddenly and unexpectedly at Calcutta, where it was awaiting trans-shipment to its native land via the weekly Rangoon boat.

INDIAN SLAIN

I recall that I couldn't help thinking how lucky Said Ali and Sandy Wee were to be in London, with a good safe distance between them and possible Burmese vengeance-seekers. And I couldn't help wondering where Me Wai was, and hoping he was safe too.

And then, some weeks later, my San Francisco Chronicle caught up with me—the issue of August 26, 1928. If I live to be a hundred I'll never forget the queer feeling at the pit of my stomach which I experienced when my astonished eye lit on this bold-faced headline over an Associated Press dispatch from London:

"CURSE OF WHITE ELEPHANT KILLS INDIAN MAHOUT

"Slain Night Following Sacred Animal's Death

"Said Ali, mahout, considered one of the finest elephant trainers in the world, was beaten to death in his apartment in the London Zoo last night. Sandy Wee, elephant driver, was found beneath Said Ali's window, seriously injured.

"Said Ali's body was badly mangled. A pickax and a sledge hammer was found beside it.

"Those versed in Indian lore saw a strange coincidence between the London tragedy and the reported death at Calcutta, last night, of Pa Wa, a famous white elephant. Wee and Ali came to England with the elephant two years ago, and later toured America.

With simple eloquence that newspaper clipping tells what happened. I later confirmed the story, learning also that both mahout and driver had been shadowed almost from the day of their return to England.

I never found out what became of Sandy Wee. One rumor was to the effect that he died of his injuries. Another story had it that he recovered and disappeared. I hope it's true that he got well. And if he's alive I hope some day to run into him and get a first-hand account of what happened on that terrible night when he and Said Ali were so brutally assaulted.

Dear Santa Claus: They are inclined
To treat the subject as a joke;
They scoff at me when I remind
Them I am positively broke.

They want new fur coats and a car,
Some furniture—a radio;
They shop incessantly and are Already asking for more dough.

No doubt you fully realize
How much my budget's out of gear;
It was my purpose to advise
You not to think of me this year.

However, if you bring each one

Newspaperman Stuff

One of the craft tells us about a rewrite man, who was driven to the smaller towns because he couldn't keep away from "the stuff." He was a grand newspaperman, however, when sober. During the Snook-Hix murder at Columbus, O., he rewrote every line of copy that came to the desk.

The case itself was a gory one, and after he had polished it up, the blood ran red for days. During all this time he never was near the scene of the crime—or the people concerned—but his descriptions of both were hair-raising in their ghastly reality.

This went on for several weeks. One night, long after the murderer paid his debt to the state—some friends took the rewrite genius to see the spot where this foulest of killings had taken place. And the otherwise hard-boiled boy, who had written such graphic descriptions—turned a pale green and swooned!

'Those Good Old Days!' With a Glass of Beer You Got Opera

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Anonymous letters are usually filled with abuse, but the other day one came filled with curious information. It is not clear why the writer should not have signed his name, unless he is a pillar of the church and fears his intimate knowledge of the old beer halls may shake the sacred edifice. Most of his information seems to be accurate enough, but other people may be able to supply further details and correct any errors. At any rate he is a splendid cicerone through the amusement world of old Pittsburgh; so we'll follow his guidance through a few of its vanished glories, noises and smells.

Mr. Seibel

The Canterbury Theater occupied the site of the Diamond National Bank, Fifth avenue and Graeme street, 1873-74. It was a variety show and admission was 15 cents.

Another theater, next to Gusky's clothing store, was in Third avenue. It was called Philo Hall and was on the second floor. All you had to do was to purchase a glass of beer and see the show.

FAMOUS TIVOLI GARDEN

Tivoli Garden was in the basement under the Grand Opera House, now the Warner Theater. This was also a beer house. The Fifth avenue entrance was occupied as a pool-room, where you could bet on the races and baseball, at 10 cents a chance. If you had a winner and was the only one to guess the combination, you got all the money on the board, less 5 per cent for the house. If there were several winners, they were paid pro rata. To win you had to guess three horses or three ball clubs.

Burnell's Museum was in Fifth avenue above Wood street. There was a small menagerie and stage show. Monkey John, of 1877 riot fame, had charge of the monkeys. He looked much like the famous prizefighter John L. Sullivan. His great sport was to throw a big monkey on the back of some jay and laugh to see the rube have his liver shaken up. Twenty-five cents admitted to all the wonders of this museum.

BATHING BEAUTIES, TOO

Harry Martin's Theater was in Fourth avenue, opposite the Dollar Savings Bank. This show had Trimble's Varieties faded for its daring. The famous Lydia Thompson and her Big Blondes were a favorite attraction. Other features were the can can and bathing beauties. The churches were up in arms about the girls wearing tights, but that only advertised the show, and the performance went on just the same.

RISE OF PAT HARRIS

Pat Harris came to Pittsburgh and started a dime show on the second floor of the Grand Opera House Building. He ran Susie Kerwin's Comic Opera for months. He also had a circus all winter, with sawdust ring, horses, acrobats and everything but the tent. Theater men all over the country complained bitterly about his cheap prices, but he kept right on and made money. He afterwards started shows in other cities.

Capt. John Klein—every politician knows him—as a boy was ticket seller for the Harris Theater.

Henry Vierheller had a beer show in Diamond street. The Walter Sisters had one a few doors away.

OLD-TIME SPORTS

The Old White House in Fifth avenue, half-way between Smithfield and Wood streets, was a great place for sports to gather. There was a show for beer, and it was always packed. This place gave way to Price's Poolroom, which ran for years, from about 1883 to 1889, and afterward was moved to Diamond street.

At Grover Cleveland's first election, Price held a million dollars in bets. "Those were the happy days!" says my correspondent.

A Keno game was running on a boat at the foot of Wood street in 1885. You paid 10 cents a card to play, and to win you had to have five numbers across the card and then yell "Keno!" You were paid in chips which could be cashed for real money. This is the same game as Lotto and is now generally known as Bingo.

Notes About New Films

"Should a Woman Tell?" adaptation of Wilson Collison's play, "The Crusader," is the new film on the Fulton screen today, to remain a week. H. B. Warner, Evelyn Brent, Ned Sparks, Lew Cody and Arthur Byron are in the cast.

"Flesh," photoplay, starring Wallace Berry, shows him as a wrestler from Germany who runs afoul of "the racket" in America. With Ricardo Cortez and Karen Morley in his support, he will be seen in "Flesh" on the Penn screen Friday.

Ann Harding and Richard Dix are co-starred in "The Conquerors," photoplay, coming Friday to the Stanley. It is announced as a picture having something of the epic sweep of "Cimarron."

Joan Blondell, in "Central Park," will come to the Warner screen Friday. The picture covers adventures of a boy and girl in an exciting day, and ranges from comedy to melodrama.

Detroit Orchestra Date Includes Matinee

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Arthur Shields, who will be seen with the Irish Players in the Nixon next week, has played the title role in "The White-headed Boy" upwards of 1,000 times. He is a native of Dublin and joined the Abbey Theater group when he was 17 years of age. Going to a performance on a certain historically celebrated Easter Monday, he discovered a revolution was in progress. He "joined" the rebels and was rewarded by imprisonment in England. Later he appeared in an Abbey play in London. Besides acting when he is at home he directs plays for the Dublin Drama League. Seats are now on sale in the Nixon box office for the repertoire of the Irish Players, the opening attraction of which will be "The New Gossoon."

* * *

Jean May, who returns to the roster of the George Sharp Players, as leading woman, next week, recently closed an engagement in a revival of "Cradle Snatchers" in New York, appearing in a company headed by Florence Moore. Miss May's reappearance in the Pitt will be in an Avery Hopwood adaptation from the French, "Naughty Cinderella," in which Irene Bordoni originally starred in New York and on tour. It is a farcical concoction, the central character of which is a girl ostensibly engaged as "secretary" to accompany a party to a watering place, but actually to deceive a husband whose wife is loved by another. It is said to be some mixup.

Actor at Columbia Once Suit Presser

Henry Armetta, young character actor in Columbia's "Deception," was a suit presser at the Lambs, New York City, when he came in contact with Raymond Hitchcock, who gave him a job in the chorus of "Yankee Counsellor and King Dodo," in which he was appearing at that time. Since then Armetta's rise has been rapid.

By Mark Hellinger

EXCELSIOR HOTEL, ROME, ITALY: I've met a lot of people lately. Some have been nice; some not so hot. Since you evidently have nothing better to do at the moment, you might as well step up and meet a few of them yourself. All set? Let's go:

Alfredo. I don't know his last name. He never uses it. But every cab driver, every policeman and practically every citizen of Rome knows of whom you are speaking when you mention Alfredo. For this man is the noodle king of all Europe.

That may or may not be a distinction. It all depends upon how you look at it. In Italy, however, the King thought so much of him that Alfredo was given a knighthood because of his noodles. At that, his majesty was probably very wise. The way the political situation looks over here, the King may some day slip Alfredo his entire title in a swap for a rich plate of the same noodles.

Alfredo is an artist in his particular line. He speaks no English. And he doesn't have to because his language is universal. When a heaping plate of Alfredo's noodles is set before you and the gentleman fiddles around with them until he thinks they are ready for your taste, you need nothing but a satisfied smile.

This man's restaurant is little more than a small shop. It is by no means an expensive joint. The two-piece orchestra—a violin and a mysterious sort of banjo—plays but two numbers through the night, "Good-Night, Sweetheart" and "Singing in the Rain." The atmosphere has little class and no distinction. Ant yet, by golly, you get to love the joint.

It's all because of Alfredo. His cheeks are like two ruddy apples. The ends of his grotesque mustache point toward the skies like two perfectly matched spears of ancient Rome.

He does, of course, exactly nothing. Yet there is a definite art in doing nothing—but doing it well. He rubs a large spoon and a fork together. He slaps a huge piece of butter among the noodles, and does nothing but mix the noodles and the butter with many varied and important gestures.

Yet Alfredo is famous not alone in Europe, but in the United States as well. The film stars of Hollywood are his devoted friends. Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks presented him with a golden fork and a golden spoon. His gallery of photographs is filled with pictures of stars and near-stars. And his autograph books contain nothing but important world names.

Leaving the restaurant last night, I asked my Roman guest if Alfredo dined exclusively on his own noodles.

"No," replied my friend, "he can't eat them at all. They're too rich for him."...

The driver of a small carriage. Give him any name you desire. I didn't have the opportunity to learn it. I passed into his life for some 15 minutes—and then out of it probably forever. Yet he came through with a remark that I consider a classic.

We hailed the carriage in front of a restaurant in this city. When I say "we," I am referring to three or four people whom I met on the boat and who were now spending a few days in Rome. The meal had been good; the wine had been plentiful. And as the funny old carriage rolled by, it seemed the most natural thing in the world to engage it.

The driver was an elderly man with a walrus mustache. He might have been anywhere from 50 to 70 years of age, and he talked to his horse with a peculiar chuckle in his voice. As he drove along, he explained things and sights he deemed of interest.

When we reached the hotel, the tariff—even the horse cabs have meters in Rome—came to 5 lire, or about 25 cents in our money. I acted as collector for the crowd, and I gathered exactly 22 lire as a tip for the driver. In other words, the man was getting $1.10 in addition to his fare. And when you stop to consider that his average tip is about 3 cents, you'll know what it meant to him.

I shook the change in my hand and called the doorman to me. I divided the money into three parts and handed the first portion to the cabby.

"Tell him," I told the doorman, "that that's for him."

The doorman did as I requested. I handed over the second part.

"Tell him," I went on, "that that's for his wife."

The doorman did the translating as the driver's eyes almost popped from his head. I dumped the remainder into his palm.

Once more the doorman spoke. The cabby had stepped to the street and was apparently on the verge of kissing my hand. He stopped suddenly, and his expression changed. A crafty look came into his watery eyes. He said something to the doorman.

I looked on in amazement.

"What's the trouble?" I asked.

"Don't tell me he's not satisfied."

"Oh, no, sir," the doorman replied. "He says you have been most generous and he thanks you very much. But he wishes to add that, in case you might be interested, he has a son, too!"...

Andree, The barber in this hotel. Andree is so grand a type that I should really devote a complete column to him. But space prevents me from using half the characters I want to put into this column. So I will have to use Andree, and let it go at that.

The man is politness personfied. He knows very little English, but he makes what he does know go a long way.

He is forever thanking the customer. As he lathers your face, he asks you if the water is warm enough. If you say it is, he thanks you. During the shave, he thanks you four or five times for giving him the honor of shaving you. When I left his shop the first day, I beat him to the punch and thanked him for not cutting me. But he didn't quite get me.

Twice now, Andree has shaved me in my room. When he came upstairs the first time, I handed him my tube of shaving cream and told him to use that instead of his regular brand. He had never seen the preparation before, but he thanked me for giving it to him and proceeded to shafe me.

When he came to my room this morning, he was already well acquainted. He thanked me for calling him, went to the bathroom and got everything in readiness. I rested comfortably on the couch in a typical columnistic attitude and thanked my stars for such a barber as Andree.

As the man began to lather my face, he talked of numerous things. I could catch but a word here and there—but it made little difference. He didn't know any more about my conversation than I knew about his.

Ten minutes went by, and Andree was still lathering my face. I began to wonder what it was all about. When five minutes more went by and he was still rubbing away, I grew a bit concerned.

"What the devil are you doing, Andree?" I inquired. "I want my beard shaved off—not rubbed off. What's doing on?"

I glanced over at the table, and then I knew. He had picked up the wrong tube and was trying to lather my face with toothpaste! . . .

LORETTA YOUNG IN A CAMERA STUDY TAKEN IN THE S TUDIO DURING THE FILMING OF "EMPLOYES' ENTRANCE"

British Actor Is Sought For Lead in Film of English Director

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 8.—American actors once more get the cold shoulder from James Whale, English director, who insists on British casts for the picture he makes at Universal.

Mr. Whale, favorably remembered for "Journey's End" and "Frankenstein," has the cables hot between Hollywood and London trying to get his favorite leading man, Colin Clive, to return to America for the principal role in "A Kiss Before the Mirror."

It does the Hollywood actors no good to stew over the situation. "Frankenstein" brought Universal a bigger profit than "All Quiet on the Western Front." Its director stands high in the confidence of the Laemmles.

When Mary Pickford's portable dressing room proved too small for her to change the voluminous costumes she wears in "Secrets," the property department appeared on the set with what happened to be a worn and battered piece of stage scenery.

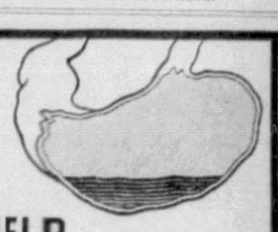
Mary Pickford

Using the greatest care, the men set to work on it and soon evolved a commodious enclosure into which they moved Mary's dressing table and makeup equipment.

And now the reason for the precaution.

This travel-worn relic was the collapsible dressing room used by Eleanora Duse in her last tour of the United States. Dying, the great Italian actress willed it to Mary, her good friend and one of the few motion picture stars whose films she attended.

GIVE YOUR STOMACH ONE HOUR'S HELP



That "lump" you feel an hour or so after eating, is a symptom of slow stomach. This very common condition can be remedied.

Instead of taking soda, or anything else you must take the rest of your life, try some diapepsin. Each tablet saves half an hour's digestion time. If your stomach is one hour slow in emptying, just take two tablets of diapepsin and all that gas, sourness, and distress after meals will be gone.

One box of Pape's Diapepsin will test your stomach and correct your digestion time. Then eat anything you like, and it will digest like crackers and milk! Keep on with diapepsin a few days, until the stomach is doing its work without need of help. When it slows down, take diapepsin again; it's good for the digestive system and can't hurt you.

Pape's Diapepsin may end all your "stomach trouble" and is certainly worth trying!

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh's Society Happenings

With all the flurry of the pre-Christmas mood, that excited state of frantic gift shopping and planning and anticipation, and with work for the welfare fund and goodness knows what all, society women have been too busy to start one of their favorite winter sports—indoor tennis.

Mrs. J. Crossmarx Hays who's chairman of the women's indoor tennis at the Pittsburgh Golf Club, says that the regular tennis matches will be postponed now, she's quite sure, until after Christmas.

On Wednesdays during the winter "tennis" season, the women meet for lunch and then play. Many watch the playing from the gallery.

Mrs. Hays has on her committee Mrs. George C. Burgwin, Mrs. William Penn Snyder, Mrs. Franklin C. Irish and Emil Frew.

Dorothy Parker's:
"Men seldom make passes
"At girls who wear glasses."
And Ogden Nash's couplet:
"Girls who are bespectackled
"Never get their neckstackled."

For none of them wears old-fashioned spectacles all the time. During a play or at a moment when their eyesight needs aid, they resort to lorgnettes or folding oxfords.

Dorothy Blaxter, one of the debs, carries her glasses about with her on a chain, and so does Alice Rust. Martha Edmondson uses a lorgnette, but popular Madelaine Alexander wears tortoise-shell rimmed spectacles when she needs any further aid to vision.

There was much panic in the Stage and Play cast for "Mary's Ankle," given Tuesday night, for fear the leading lady, La Salle Dorrance, who was sick in bed with a cold, might not recover. But she was there for the opening.

PARIS USES VARIOUS DEVISES FOR WIDE-SHOULDER EFFECT

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 8. —Shoulder width remains the most important fashion feature in Paris. Hardly a frock or coat leaves the doors of one of the higher class designers without some device to get the wide-shouldered look which results by contrast, in a slender-hipped effect.

* * *

BIG SLEEVES, dropped shoulder seams and cape effects are all used; and the most popular of all, probably, is the cape effect. Different couturiers use it in different ways—some in little separate capes that reach only to the elbows, some in widened collars that hang low off the shoulders, some in little double capes and some in an adroit cape-like cutting of the sleeves.

* * *

AMONG MOLYNEUX'S new silk dresses there are a number that have clever little sleeves like those in the dress sketched at the right; the fullness is added in the center of the sleeves, and is so ample that the sleeve itself falls in a cape-like fold. This particular dress is of black crepe de chine, cut on bias lines, with a scarf belt that is half black, half white.

* * *

THE CHANEL dress, also sketched, has actual little capes over each sleeve, and sleeves that are puffed full at a point just above the elbow. The dress itself is fashioned of a new version of matelasse—a fabric called cloque, which is a silky weave with blistered effects on its surface. It is in navy blue, with white crepe de chine guimpe and cuffs.

Make $1 go as far as $3 when fighting those stubborn colds

PEPSODENT ANTISEPTIC is 3 times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes 3 times as far. And whether you buy the 25c, 50c, or $1 size, you still get 3 times as much for your money.

YOU may be trying to save money. But instead of saving it, you're losing it if you don't know the difference between the two kinds of mouth antiseptics on the market. One kind must be used full strength to be effective—if you add water, it won't kill germs.

Pepsodent CAN be diluted

But the other kind—Pepsodent Antiseptic—is powerful enough to be diluted with 2 parts of water and still kill germs in less than 10 seconds—yet Pepsodent is absolutely safe when used full strength. Pepsodent Antiseptic is at least three times as powerful as other leading mouth antiseptics. Hence it goes three times as far—gives you three times as much for your money—and gives you extra protection against stubborn sore throat colds, unpleasant breath, and germ infections.

Be safe—and save money!

When choosing your mouth antiseptic, be sure you choose the one that, even when it is diluted with water, still kills germs! The other kind costs more . . . either in money or in health. Insist on Pepsodent Antiseptic—and be safe!

IMPURE BREATH
(Halitosis)

The amazing results of Pepsodent Antiseptic in fighting sore throat colds prove its effectiveness in checking Bad Breath (Halitosis). Remember, Pepsodent is 3 times more powerful in killing germs than other leading mouth antiseptics. Remember, even when diluted with water it still kills germs.

THE SUPER-FUEL AT NO EXTRA COST

But the road test is the real test! That tells whether a fuel is good, under actual driving conditions. Snow, hills, mileage, traffic—the road test includes them all. It shows how a gasoline stands up under punishment, during the bleak, cold days of winter.

A road test in one automobile tells a lot about a fuel. A road test in hundreds of thousands of cars tells all there is to know . . . it's the greatest test that any motor fuel can have. That's the test ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH passes every day!

How does it come out? Well, in Pennsylvania, motorists buy more than 2 gallons of ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH for every 1 gallon of any other gasoline. What greater proof could you ask of the extra qualities that are packed into this great fuel?

Don't be satisfied with the tests of others, however. Make your own, in your own car. Use ATLANTIC WHITE FLASH for at least two weeks. You'll quickly learn why it's favored 2 to 1.

PENNANT RACE JOKE UNDER PLAYOFFS

KENESAW M. LANDIS, who went to Columbus in his capacity as baseball commissioner to attend the meeting of the National Association and get the lowdown on the minor league situation, may be pardoned if he imagined he had wandered into the wrong town and found a lot of hockey magnates assembled instead of the expected session of baseball men. The play-off idea, ratified by the American Association is more in line with the stuff pulled in the ice sport than with established methods of determining the best club in a diamond race.

K. M. Landis

The proposal to divide the league into geographical groups, and have the leaders of the Eastern and Western divisions meet in a seven-game post-season series to decide the pennant, is even more absurd than the hockey play-offs. All four clubs of one group might finish in the first division, and all four of the other group might finish in the second flight, making it possible for the club that finished fifth in the real race to win the pennant in a short series. Picture a pennant being awarded to a club that was beaten out by four others, and that which there were only three weaker outfits in an eight-club circuit. The object of a baseball race is to determine the best club in the whole league for a full season, and the awarding of a championship to a fifth-place team, with three better clubs barred from the competition, certainly would not be carrying out that idea.

AS CHAIRMAN OF a committee that is drawing up recommendations for the slashing of expenses in the major baseball leagues next year, President Emil Fuchs, of the Boston Braves, admits some suggestions will be offered at the coming meeting, but says he cannot make them known at this time.

According to Fuchs, the club owners are none too happy about the outlook for big league baseball in 1933. They expect to see normal conditions restored in 1934, but look for next year to be tough, and figure that they've got to trim ship. Salaries are certain to be cut, he says, and there will be a general reduction in overhead.

THE TWO MAJOR league clubs in Chicago, which will be competing for world fair crowds next season and know that visitors won't patronize a losing team, continue their efforts to corral new talent.

The White Sox are trying hard to buy one or two first-string pitchers, and the Cubs are said to have carried another deal close to the point of consummation. President Bill Veeck says that if it goes through it will be as important as the Babe Herman trade. The Columbus reports that the Pirates are dickering for Freddie Lindstrom, evidently have spurred the Bruins to seek more strength.

THAT THE DEPRESSION isn't the only thing hurting baseball, and that the magnates must sell the game to the public all over again, is the warning sounded by Lefty Leifield, former Pirate pitcher and until recently manager of the St. Paul club in the American Association. "Until now the owners have let baseball sell itself," quoth Leifield, "but hereafter they will have to do the selling. It's in a bad way. For the last three weeks of the American Association season this year we didn't average 200 paid admissions a day in St. Paul. The year's series with Minneapolis, league leaders, fell off 30,000. In Kansas City a night game was played and an automobile offered as a prize, and the best we could draw was 2,200 attendance."

Tim Mara

WHETHER OR NOT the colleges take up Pop Warner's idea of preventing tie football games by awarding victory to the team making the greater number of first downs when the score is even, the professional league will go ahead with its own plan to avert deadlocked contests.

Tim Mara, owner of the New York Giants in the National Professional Football League, repeats that he will propose a change in the rules for next year, whereby, in event the teams are tied at the end of the regulation playing time, an extra period will be played. Mara feels that pro football owes its customers a decision in each game, and believes he will have the support of most of the other club owners.

SEEMINGLY, IT DOESN'T matter how smart they become in football after many years in the major ranks, they'll fall sometimes for tricks so ancient that they wouldn't fool the greenest sandlotters.

Imagine the New York Giants, first college stars and then professionals of long experience, being taken in on the gray-whiskered sleeping-end play, which the Carlisle Indians brought here more than 25 years ago, and which Amos Stagg introduced several seasons earlier.

WHEN THE GIANTS and Chicago Bears lined up after Red Grange had carried the ball to New York's 29-yard line, Luke Johnson, Bear left end, lay flat on his face along the sideline, far from the point of scrimmage. None of the Giants noticed him until Keith Molesworth fell back to throw a pass, and then it was too late. The ball arched into Johnson's hands on the 18-yard line, and after a moment's gymnastics to keep from going out of bounds, Luke raced unmolested for the game's only touchdown.

NOTHING SERVES BETTER than the record of Frank Carideo this fall to demonstrate that all-America playing greatness does not always assure a man will be an immediate success as a coach, and that anyhow, even if he is as good a coach as he was a field general, he can't mold winning teams without the right kind of material.

Carideo left Notre Dame with the reputation of having one of the best football heads in the country, but in his first year as head coach at University of Missouri this year, after a season as assistant at Purdue, his team won only one game out of nine.

George Blake

Ben Jeby is a much improved fighter since he began to center his attack on his opponent's midriff. Jeby himself says he had been boxing for two years before he discovered that the other fellow had anything but a head that would do for a target.

---

GEORGE BLAKE, manager of La Barba, tells of a novel way in which Jim Jeffries, a great body puncher himself in his day, illustrated to a protege the wisdom of going after a foeman's stomach. "When Jeff was coaching his heavyweight prospect, Al Morro," Blake relates, "he got a bucket, a tub and a basket of apples. He put the bucket on a chair, gave Morro the apples, and told Morro to see how many apples he could throw into the bucket from a distance of about 30 feet. Morro couldn't figure what it was all about, but he did as he was told. He failed to throw a single apple into the bucket. Then Jeff gathered up the apples, rolled out the tub, and told Morro to see how many apples he could throw into the tub. It was a cinch. The young heavyweight put every apple into the tub. But he didn't know what Jeff was getting at until the former champion told him that was just an example of the difference between punching for the head and for the body. 'It's easy to hit a man in the body, but the chin is something different,' Jeff said."

BOBBY DAWSON FIRST FOE FOR GENE

SYNOPSIS

The author has sketched his boyhood days, when the Hudson River was his swimmin' hole, enlivened often with impromptu scraps, until he left school at 15 to become a $5-a-week office boy. His first ring idol was Jack Goodman, New York's famed West Side lightweight of two decades ago. Two Willies—Ward and Green—helped Gene in his fisctic infancy. Boxes at his first smoker for the K. of C. His ginger ale-and-sandwich fighting days.

By GENE TUNNEY
Retired Heavyweight Champion.

CHAPTER FOUR

Willie Green, discovering a comeback not at all to his liking, accepted a position as boxing and games instructor at the Greenwich Settlement House, on Jones street. Finding it impossible to get a workout from any of his pupils, he invited me to come down and box with him on the night he was free from classes — Saturday. I accepted his invitation and, at the beginning, boxed three rounds with him.

Gene Tunney

As the weeks passed, we gradually increased our matches up to 10 rounds. My steady Saturday night engagement for two years, with hardly an exception, was boxing 10 rounds with Green in a little room in the Greenwich Settlement House. Green was a resourceful, skillful, hard-hitting lightweight. He had a splendid knack of delivering short, hard blows. I learned during those two years how to slip and knock down leads, counter with lefts or rights, feint, sidestep, avoid being hit unnecessarily, how to conserve my energy and time my attacks.

"Let's go down and see Willie Green make a punching bag of Gene Tunney."

Much time passed and considerable patience was exercised during this period. The boys eventually were saying "Let's go down and see Willie Green and Gene Tunney box." This early boxing with the hard-hitting, dangerous fellow made a careful boxer of me. The cautiousness always remained a part of my boxing technique.

STUDIES TECHNIQUE

On nights other than Saturday, I was over at Public School 41 with the boys of the athletic club, either running up Fifth avenue, playing basketball, soccer, indoor baseball or boxing with my teammates. Frequently we mixed the evening and did several things.

After starting boxing with Willie Green, I became greatly interested in technique, and at the recreation center I used to watch the boys from the sidelines, studying their defense and methods of delivery. I noticed when leading a left they could be countered with a left; when using a right, they could be hit with a right. I also noticed that they knew no more about infighting than they did about body attack. I began developing ideas about offense and defense.

I quietly studied each department and practiced what I thought helpful. At the end of two years, I had improved so that when boxing with Willie Green he would occasionally say:

"Don't cross your right so hard."

Oftentimes in desperate efforts to hit me, he would fall flat on his face, finding only air the target of his well-intended blows. Willie eventually refused to put the gloves on with me at all.

However, during this period of development, Willie Green became very proud of his pupil. He thought that he ought to exhibit him. I had great confidence and respect for Green and believed he could do no wrong. As fighters went, Green was rather intelligent. This made his influence over me doubly strong.

OFFERED STAR BOUT

I had secured quite a local reputation through the various smokers I attended. This, and the fact that I was accepted as the best boxer in Greenwich Village, brought me to the attention of Billy Jacobs, who was matchmaker of the Sharkey Athletic Club, immortalized by George Bellows' lithograph "A Stag at Sharkey's." Accordingly, Jacobs came to me with an overture to box at the Sharkey Athletic Club. He said:

"Gene, I will put you in a star bout. No fighter that I have ever known has been given a star bout for his first professional fight."

Though this was a very flat-

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: AN EXTRAORDINARY HIT—On September 15, 1917, W. W. Pitman, constable of Precinct No. 1, of Wharton County, undertook to arrest one Francisco Lopez, a diminutive Mexican bad man, in the city of Wharton, Tex. As Pitman approached, the "hombre" opened fire with his .38 pistol, Pitman returning fire with his .45 colt. The first shot from the 45 hit squarely in the muzzle of Lopez' gun, rendering it utterly useless for further dueling, allowing Pitman a decided but bloodless victory. The gun is now in my office in New York City, and will be displayed in the "Believe It Or Not Odditorium," which is to be opened shortly. EIGHT HUNDRED AND SIXTY-ONE MILES IN SIX DAYS—The Count de Montenoy was emissary of Napoleon I to the court of Vienna in 1809. The French emperor sought the daughter of Franz I, of Austria, in marriage, and so anxious was he to obtain the Austrian ruler's consent that he dispatched the young count—the most renowned horseman in France. Montenoy rode from Paris to Vienna, a distance of 861 miles, in less than six days. He did not change horses en route, and arrived in Vienna in so exhausted a state that he was permitted to remain seated in the imperial presence. History notes that Montenoy was successful in his mission. Napoleon rewarded him by presenting him the horse, in addition to a jeweled snuffbox and a grant of 60,000 francs. THE FIRST SUN DIAL—A sun dial, said to have been brought to the New World by Columbus, was recovered from the house of the Admiral's son, Diego, in Santo Domingo by Captain General Francisco de Rubio, and erected in front of the old Government House in vicinity of the Ozama River in the Capital of the Dominican Republic, 1753.

COURT CLINIC TO ATTRACT BIG TURNOUT

By JESS CARVER

The itinerary (high-hat for schedule) for Pitt's trip to the Rose Bowl at Pasadena has been adopted; Coach Clifford Carlson has completed plans for his annual basketball clinic and the inaugural game of the 1932-33 season with Georgetown Sat'day and Coach Jock Sutherland is becoming more taciturn and solemn each passing moment.

Fifteen days before the date of the game, the Panther varsity squad will leave here for the trip across the continent. The Pitt party is scheduled to pull out at 11:20 p. m., December 18, which happens to be one week from this coming Sunday. It will lay over for a couple hours in St. Louis Monday and arrive in Dallas, Tex., early on the morning of December 20. After a workout in the afternoon on the Southern Methodist field, the Panthers will push on to Tuscon, Ariz., arriving there the next evening.

NINE DAYS IN TUSCON

For the following nine days, the Golden Cats will sojourn with the sand fleas, Mexican hairless dogs, the heat and hot tamales as Coach Sutherland puts the final touches to his eleven's attack and defense and gets it acclimated for the invasion of the Rose Bowl.

The squad will leave Tucson the evening of December 30, and arrive in Pasadena the next morning, where it will be greeted by a committee from the Rose Tournament Association, a carload or two of movie nifties, Hap O'Connor and very possibly, Umpire Beans Reardon, of the good old National League. If neither Reardon or O'Connor are present, the welcome will not be official. If they are, it will be more than that.

Pitt authorities are reported to have wired Tucson to have some fireplaces erected, so the Panther laddies will have some place to hang their socks Christmas Eve.

REIDER REJOINS SQUAD

Capt. Bulldog Reider rejoined the varsity for yesterday's workout and was able to get about in right chipper fashion on his bum leg. He hopes to have it in shape for actual duty against the Trojans.

Meanwhile, the Panther scouting force has been augumented, or a move made in that direction, with the assigning of Bill Kern to assist Hank Hangartner in looking over the Trojans as they battle Notre Dame in Los Angeles Saturday. Kern departed via airplane yesterday and is due in L. A. some time tonight.

A record turnout for Pitt's basketball clinic, which will go down in history imposingly dubbed "The Dr. Red Carlson Basketball Clinic for the Advancement of Basketball and the Confounding of Officials," is expected in the Stadium Pavilion all day Saturday. So far, more than 100 high school coaches alone have signified their intention of attending the affair, and as each will bring alone most of his squad, one readily can see that the Pavilion will be packed.

The Georgetown varsity squad, with four members of last year's strong team included, will pull in early Saturday morning. The four veterans include Capt. Jim Crowley, Bill Connors, Vernon Murphy and Lee (Ah Heah Yuh Callin') Carolan.

FORDHAM MAY SIGN HANLEY

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—The Evening Post says that Dick Hanley, coach of the Northwestern football team, has been selected to succeed Maj. Frank W. Cavanaugh as head coach at Fordham University and that his appointment will be announced shortly after January 1.

Meanwhile, rumors and denials flew thick and fast concerning other open coaching jobs.

Jimmy Phelan, at Washington, denied he had received official information concerning the post at the University of Chicago, where a successor to Amos Alonzo Stagg is being sought.

The names of Tad Jones, former coach at Yale, and Hack Applequist, coach at Sacramento Junior College, were added to the list of possible successors to Pop Warner at Stanford.

Maj. Robert R. Neyland, coach at Tennessee, announced that he had been made an offer by Fordham, and Villanova, contrary to expectations, did not announce the signing of a new coach to succeed Harry Stuhldreher.

Oliver, Crafton Alumni to Clash

The Welfare Fund will be the beneficiary of the benefit football game to be played Saturday afternoon between the alumni teams representing Oliver and Crafton high schools. The game will be played at Crafton Athletic Field.

C. OF C. HONORS PITT, PERRY

The city's college and schoolboy football champions came into their own today as the Chamber of Commerce honored the Golden Panthers of Pitt, intercollegiate rulers for 1932, and the Perry High School squad, City League champs, at the annual gridiron luncheon in the Chamber's dining room at noon.

Pitt received the C. of C. trophy and the one awarded by the city, while Perry received the C. of C. award. Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, responded on behalf of the Panthers and Coach Chester Smith, of Perry, for the schoolboy champs. The trophies were received by Capt. Bulldog Reider, of Pitt, and Jimmy Manning, of Perry.

Included among the guests of honor were the Mayor and members of City Council; Chancellor Bowman, of Pitt; Rev. Callahan, president of Duquesne University; Superintendent of Education Ben S. Graham; Director of County Parks A. M. Marion; President Baker, of Carnegie Tech; Coach Bob Waddell, of Tech; Assistant Athletic Director James Hagan, of Pitt; John Holohan, graduate manager of athletics at Duquesne, and the Rev. G. E. Swoyer, of the North Side.

The Perry High School Orchestra and the Pitt Band took care of the musical part of the program. The affair was broadcast over Station KDKA and its short wave station W8XK, direct from the dining room, with Bill Farren at the microphone.

Warner Praised By Chief Bender

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—When Glenn S. Warner becomes football coach at Temple University, he will be welcomed by one of the greatest athletes he ever trained—a baseball player.

Charles Albert (Chief) Bender, famous old pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics and student at the Carlisle Indian School when Pop Warner was coaching there, today gave the "Old Fox" credit for instilling in him the guile and skill that made him one of the top flight pitchers.

OWNERS AGREE ON CUTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—All of the 16 club owners of the big leagues have contributed their opinions to a copyrighted symposium gathered by a local newspaper in anticipation of the annual major league gathering here next week. Following are a few of the comments:

William E. Benswanger, Pittsburgh Pirates:

"A shorter training season will accomplish as much physical good. Salaries must be kept within bounds. We are against broadcasting of games."

Sam Breadon, St. Louis Cardinals:

Billy Evans, Cleveland Indians:

Charles A. Stoneham, New York Giants:

With a few exceptions the owners agree that salaries and all overhead expenses must be sharply reduced, that showmanship must be improved, by putting on such added attractions as field days, old timers' games, band concerts along with the growing custom of having ladies' and boys' days, and that the player limit should not be lowered.

The Tipoff

Just to be in style, or to follow the style set by a dozen members of his varsity court squad, Coach Chick Davies, of the Dukes, is sporting a mild attack of the flu and is confined to his bed. The coach expects to be back in the old harness within a couple of days.

Whitey Randour, baptised George, a native of McDonald, will lead the Villanova varsity football team next fall. Randour was selected as one of the East's outstanding backs this season. He has a kid brother, Hubert, quarterback of the Pitt freshmen.

Max Hannum, who got himself lost in New York after the Carnegie Tech-Georgetown game last Sat'day, is back home, safe and as sound as ever, which is a debatable subject, and resumed direction of the Tech varsity court squad yesterday. Der Maxie is fairing the prospect of sending his teams into the first few games of the season minus the services of Red Fergus and Lou Jagnow.

According to Duke Kinsey, who'll sell you a steamship ticket any day in the week to most any destination, including Pango Pango, reports that Buddy Ogrend and Dutch Crider, two Carnegie Tech juniors, are plotting a short cruise over New Year's Day.

Football relations between Wash-Jeff and Waynesburg will be resumed next fall, according to Athletic Director Pete Henry, of Wash-Jeff. The Jackets and Presidents are slated to clash October 7. The last meeting between the schools occurred in 1927.

Three Colleges Name 1933 Grid Captains

Penn State, Lehigh and the University of Kentucky have elected their football captains for 1933. The elections took place last night.

At Penn State, Tom Slusser, of Pittsburgh, former Schenley High star, regular left end, will lead the Lions in '33. Paul Short, halfback, was named by Lehigh, and Howard (Dutch) Kreuter, also a halfback, was honored by Kentucky.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Wilbert Robinson, of the Atlanta Baseball Club in the Southern Association, has announced the purchase of Art Weis, outfielder, from the Louisville club of the American Association.

LANDIS HAS NO VERDICT, COURT TO GET FIGHT

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Sam Colacurio, owner of the Jersey City club of the International League, said today an equity suit for $111,500 would be filed in the Jersey City courts against the Brooklyn Dodgers' management over Brooklyn's disposition of 17 players.

Colacurio's statement followed a ruling by Commissioner K. M. Landis that he had no authority to decide the case between the two clubs.

The Jersey City club appealed to the high commissioner, Colacurio said, after Brooklyn took 17 players from the International League outfit and then declared it would not exercise its option, returning five of the players, Colacurio said:

"Brooklyn did damage to the Jersey City club by manipulating ball players and selling them to the Brooklyn club at ridiculous prices.

"The Jersey City club turned over to Brooklyn on April 29, 17 ball players which were the outright property of the Jersey City club. Brooklyn on November 1, notified Jersey City it would not exercise its option and turned back to us five players. We are going to fight for some justice, we are asking for $111,500."

The International League owners were voting today on the adoption of a plan providing for a playoff series to decide the 1933 pennant winner.

The meeting of the International League was holding the major portion of attention at today's session.

Deals, Decisions

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 8.—Deals put through, decisions handed down and club transfers arranged at the convention of minor leagues here today were as follows:

The Texas League, with 10 teams, became one of the largest in baseball today following acquisition of the Tulsa and Oklahoma City teams from the Western League. President J. Alvin Gardner declared this for the present there is no plan for reducing the membership. Tulsa is a Pittsburgh Pirate farm.

Left with six teams, the Western League now may take members from cities farther East. Jack Holland, of Oklahoma City, was said to have agreed to start a Western League Club at Lincoln, Neb.

Sale of the Kansas City Club of the American Association to Lee J. Keyser, of Des Moines, was no in the air today as much as it was a month ago. Keyser announced he had received a memorandum from the Kansas City club board of directors, but that it lacked many details which necessarily must be put into writing before he will buy the club. Keyser said he would go to Kansas City Saturday to "find out what's what."

St. Paul, of the American Association, announced the purchase of Pitchers Harmidas Ashe from Newark, of the International League, and Floyd Newkirk from Binghamton, of the New York-Pennsylvania League.

Ducky Holmes, owner of the Dayton club in the Central League, announced sale to Catcher Wally Dunham to Baltimore, of the International League.

Knoxville, of the Southern Association, announced the purchase of Grady Atkins, fast curve ball pitcher with St. Paul in the American Association last year.

Howard Miller, over whom the Longview, Tex., club of the Texas League, and Hollywood, of the Pacific Coast League, squabbled last summer, will play with Longview next season, baseball's board of arbitration ruled today. In another ruling the board held the Missions club of the Coast League owed Joe Devine $1,725 in back salary.

All-America Board Selects Its Annual Team

BILL ALEXANDER EDDIE CASEY GLENN WARNER JESSE HARPER CHRISTY WALSH

It won't be long now before the real All-America team's makeup will be known. Here we have the All-America Board of Football gathered in New York to make its selections, which will be published exclusively in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph next Sunday. Warner is the former Pitt and Stanford coach, who goes to Temple next year; Casey is the Harvard coach; Alexander the Georgia Tech coach and Harper the Notre Dame athletic director, while Walsh is the originator of the All-America Board idea, whose team has come to be recognized as the most representative of the many selections because of the prominence of the members of its organization and their knowledge of the sport and their contracts. The board has been selecting teams since 1924. Casey is its newest member.

GOOD BATTLES AT GARDEN

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Johnny Datto vs. Jackie Willis, 8 rounds, Philadelphia.

Steve Hamas vs. Duane Duncan, 10 rounds, Paterson, N. J.

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

The two Tonys—Herrera and Falco, respectively of Chicago and Philadelphia—meet in the 10-round main bout, and they are two of the ranking lightweights of the land.

In the eight-round semi-final, Frankie Bojarski, of Erie, meets Sid Silas, local boxer, in a return bout, Bojarski having won their windup in a recent show in the same ring, when Silas was ill.

JARRELL RETURNS

Pee Wee Jarrell, of Terre Haute, Ind., who has boxed twice before at the Garden, registering a hit with the fans in beating Davy Grove and being knocked out by Eddie (Kid) Wolfe, after leading all of the way for seven rounds, returns in the second bout, against Freddie Edwards, of East Liverpool, O.

Johnny Riske, of the South Hills, and Red Bruce, of the East End, box the opener. They are the least known of the battlers on the card, but they may put on the best show of the night—who knows?

BANTAMS END DRILLS

Jimmy Thomas and Bobby Leitham, the Canadian bantamweight champion, put the finishing touches on their conditioning today for their 10-round windup at the Arena, on the North Side, tomorrow night.

Leitham spoke during the radio period of the Trained Seals of the sports department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE last night, along with his manager, Sam Gibbs, and made quite an impression. His record is a good one and he has been installed the favorite to defeat Thomas, the best of the local little fellows, on the basis of achievement.

Between Rounds

Six Y. M. H. A. boxers will compete in the Western Pennsylvania championship amateur tournament at the McKeesport Palisades arena next Monday and Thursday nights. They are Tubby Mills, Al Quaill, Wade Stevens, Frank Sisinwski, Jimmy Campbell and Steve Levandowski. Joe Waico, Teddy Morsak, Frankie McLaughlin, Wilfred Black, John Burkholder and Buster Lowstetter will box under the colors of the McKeesport A. C. Entries close Saturday.

We knew there would be more of them. Add to the list of challengers of Pee Wee Jarrell the name of Marty Gornick, of Whitaker, Irish Kane's protege.

Jules Beck, the Motor Square Garden matchmaker, was impressed by the work of Phil Zwick in his bout with Pete Nebo in Cleveland, Tuesday night, and plans to use him at an early date. Cleveland newspapers said Zwick was the real winner of the bout, although Nebo received the decision.

Manuel Quintero, Spanish-American welterweight, of Tampa, Fla., arrived in town this morning with his manager, M. M. Juster, and went into a huddle with the local matchmakers. He is seeking a match with Ted Yarosz, or will box anyone up to 150 pounds. He recently snared a win over Tommy Freeman in Florida.

Babe in Stands As Team Triumphs

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Playing without their suspended captain and All-America forward, Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, the Dallas Golden Cyclones, 1931 National Women's A. A. U. basketball champions and 1932 runners-up, opened their cage season last night with a 44-to-16 victory over a team from Fort Worth.

FIGHT RESULTS

SPORT VIGNETTES

If nothing else comes of the wholesale shifting about of football coaches before the next season, the situation is certain to focus the spotlight upon the fact that coaches must have the material if they are to succeed. . . . Pop Warner did not have the material demanded by his schedule at Stanford, and Harvey Harman is on record as asking for more and better football players at Pennsylvania. . . . Other coaches are expressing themselves similarly. . . . Seemingly we are verging upon another cycle in the history of the sport, directly opposed to that of the last few seasons, when the Carnegie Foundation had all of the colleges and universities scared of their own shadows.

Now the reaction has set in and there is a facing of the cold facts . . . The big colleges, in a football sense, go in for football in a determined and strictly commercial sense, and there is entirely too much hypocrisy about the whole proceeding . . . Better to wipe out the hypocrisy and be above board about the entire matter than to continue the sham at the expense of the smaller teams that can't be expected to compete successfully without putting excessive strain upon the players at their command . . . Naturally, a college education is the thing for young men . . . Through athletic scholarships many a youngster is enabled to obtain an education which he could not otherwise afford . . . If the players are to be put through the mill, they should get some reward out of the huge gate receipts.

We hear on all sides that the receipts go to maintain other sports which are not self-sustaining . . . Largely they go to pay the salaries of imposing athletic staffs, including coaches, trainers and directors . . . Without the players, these persons would have no jobs . . . Why, therefore, should not the player reap some benefit, even if it be only the meager scholarship and expenses of his education? . . . The subject is one calling for thought and attention from the holier-than-thous who hold up their hands in horror at the very idea of an athlete sharing to any extent whatsoever in the spoils of his labor.

Players of the Stanford team, in making their all-opponents' selections, have honored Skladany and Heller, of Pitt, with unanimous votes . . . Hartwig, the Pitt guard, is an even choice with Rosenberg, of Southern California . . . Weinstock, of Pitt, was second choice at fullback, with Griffith, of Southern California, first . . . Smith and Brown, of Southern California, are picked for the tackles over both Cuba and Walton, of Pitt. . . . Pitt players, in making up their all-opponents' selections, vote Koken as the only Notre Dame player on the team, and he is ranked second among the halfbacks they have opposed, with George Kavel, of Carnegie Tech, first, and Fields, Army, and Caddell, Stanford, tied for third.

Saturday's Notre Dame-Southern California game at Los Angeles marks the seventh meeting of these teams, and the Trojans have won only two of the games so far staged. The results: 1926, Notre Dame, 13; Southern California, 12; 1927, Notre Dame, 7; Southern California, 6; 1928, Southern California, 27; Notre Dame, 14; 1929, Notre Dame, 13; Southern California, 12; 1930, Notre Dame, 27; Southern California, 6; 1931, Southern California, 16; Notre Dame, 14 (decided by Johnny Baker's field goal in the final minute of play.)

Frankie Battaglia, the Canadian middleweight, has knocked out 26 opponents in 30 professional bouts and has had 20 of his opponents on the floor in the first round . . . He is one of the greatest natural punchers in the business . . . He represented Canada in the Olympic games in 1928 . . . If you want to know the deadest thing in sports right now it probably is the dead ball rule in football in its present form . . . ## PIRATE-GIANT DEAL FADES

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

President William E. Benswanger, of the Pirates, ill at his home here, said that proposed deals with the New York Giants appear to have been blocked. Benswanger made this statement after receiving several phone calls from Manager George Gibson, in which the latter revealed the outcome of his conferences with Bill Terry, Giant pilot.

It is known that the Bucs are eager to put through a deal for Fred Lindstrom, of the Giants. In exchange for Lindstrom, Terry originally asked a surprising amount of talent, according to the Buc prexy. In his recent conferences with Gibson, Terry has raised the "ante" to such an extent that the meeting of his demands would result in the wrecking of the Pirates, Benswanger says.

The Pirate chief added that the Lindstrom deal would be dropped unless Terry's demands were greatly modified.

The triple gave Gilbert a total of 187 winners for the season against 182 for Mills. The best Hank could do during the afternoon was to finish third on two mounts.

PRIMO TO BOX KAYO

RIVALS PRESS CHAMP IN CUE TOURNEY

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Ralph Greenleaf holds his usual position today at the top of the standings in the national pocket billiard championship tournament, but he has yet to meet Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, and Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland.

Those who claim to know, say it is Ponzi and Rudolph that Greenleaf will have to beat if he is to win his eleventh title since 1919. The 33-year-old titleholder has won his two starts, while five others—Rudolph, Ponzi, Benny Allen, of Kansas City; Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago, and James Caras, of Wilmington, Del.—are close behind with one victory each.

Although failing to equal Greenleaf's high run of 67 yesterday, both Ponzi and Rudolph played brilliant billiards in winning their opening game. Ponzi ran out on Frank Taberski, ex-titleholder, of Schenectady, in four innings, while Rudolph turned back James Mills, of San Jose, Cal., in eight frames. Each had a high run of 53.

Rudolph, who defeated Greenleaf two years ago to win the title, has a chance to pull up on even terms with the champion when he meets George Kelly, of Philadelphia, last year's runner-up in the final game tonight. The last time they met was in the 1931 play-off for second place, Kelly winning 125 to 119.

Caras and Natalie also play their second game of the tournament in the afternoon. The young Wilmington star, who turned in a surprise victory over Kelly in his first appearance in a national championship, meets Mills. Natalie clashes with Walter Franklin, of Kansas City, who yesterday was Greenleaf's second victim.

Greenwood Leads In Cue Match

The second block of the 150-point exhibition three-cushion billiard match between Billy Greenwood, of Pittsburgh, and Charley McCourt, of Cleveland, will be played in the Ellis' parlors tonight, beginning at 8 o'clock.

In the first block last night, Greenwood won, 50 to 44. Both players had high runs of five.

TWO CLASS AA SCHOOLS SET SCHEDULES

By JULIUS LEVIN

One of the best football attractions ever offered the followers of the Mt. Lebanon High School eleven will be presented next fall when Bill Cox brings his Little Presidents, of Washington High, to the borough gridiron for a battle with Henry Leucht's machine.

The game has been tentatively set for November 4 and will give local football fans an opportunity to see the Washington machine in action in a daylight contest.

Beside the Mt. Lebanon game, the officials at Washington have signed three new opponents for the Little Presidents, Uniontown, Jeannette and Burgettstown replacing teams met in 1932.

Five class AA games are listed for the Blue and Black machine next fall. Clairton will be met at Clairton on October 7, New Castle at New Castle on October 13, Turtle Creek Union at Washington on October 28, Charleroi at Washington on November 11 and Jeannette at Jeannette on November 18.

The Little Presidents open their season on September 23 with Waynesburg at Washington. Burgettstown is met on September 29, while Uniontown is the attraction on October 21.

East Huntingdon High has been dropped from the Norwin grid card, according to the nine-game schedule announced by Jack Clawson. Five class AA games will be played by Norwin next fall. The complete schedule follows: September 23, East McKeesport at Irwin; September 30, New Kensington, away; October 7, Sewickley Township at Irwin; October 14, Greensburg, away; October 21, Pitcairn at Irwin; October 28, Scott at Irwin; November 4, Jeannette at Irwin; November 11, McKeesport, away; November 18, Turtle Creek at Irwin. Pitcairn replaces East Huntingdon.

School Notes

The Greensburg High School basketball team, under the coaching of Earl Loucks, will meet Johnstown Central in its final pre-season game at Greensburg, December 16.

Centerville High School will have co-captains next fall. They are Billy Sikora, guard, and Mac Bayer, halfback. Prospects for a winning team are bright, despite the loss of veteran material.

The Business Men's Association of Crafton plans to honor the graduating members of the high school football squad at the close of each season by presenting them rings or gold footballs. The seniors will have their choice of gifts.

The Ellwood City High School football squad will be honored at a testimonial banquet next Wednesday evening in the high school dining room. Elmer Layden and Chick Davies, Duquesne University coaches, will be among the speakers. George (Gamby) Benedict, former Duquesne basketball and football star, is coach at Ellwood City.

SQUASH LEAGUE REVISES CARD FOR SEASON

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

A revised schedule of play for squads entered in the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association Inter-Club League race was released by Secretary W. McCook Reed, of the local court body, this morning. Re-arrangement of both the Class A and the Class B cards was necessitated by the withdrawal a fortnight ago of the University Club host. Two upper division tussles were played under the new bill last Saturday.

Loss of the Varsity contingent leaves in the Class A running but four quintets—P. A. A., Pittsburgh Golf Club, Keystone Athletic Club and Allegheny Country Club. The Class B roster remains unchanged, with P. A. A., Pittsburgh Golf Club, Keystone A. C. and Edgeworth Club booked to seek honors. The Winged Headers will strive to defend the team crowns in each section.

Start of hostilities in the B chase the day after tomorrow sends P. A. A. to the Golf Club area and Keystone A. C., to Edgeworth. Makeup of the secondary outfits remains largely conjectural.

The revised squash racquet schedule follows:

CLASS A

December 31—Allegheny Country Club at Pittsburgh Golf Club, P. A. A. at Keystone A. C.

CLASS B

December 17—Edgeworth Club at Pittsburgh Golf Club, P. A. A. at Keystone A. C.
December 31—Keystone A. C. at P. A. A., Pittsburgh Golf Club at Keystone A. C.
January 21—Keystone A. C. at Pittsburgh Golf Club, P. A. A. at Edgeworth Club.
February 5 to 18—Inter-Club championships.
February 19 to March 4—Class B City Championships.

SOCCER STARS IN CUP PLAY

By TOM BIRKS

National Amateur Cup ties will put a crimp into the Central League soccer games scheduled for Saturday afternoon. With Lawrenceville and the German Sport Club tied up in cup contests, only two league games will be played.

At Swissvale, Mt. Lebanon and Westinghouse will clash, and at McKeesport, the Union Switch and Signal eleven will meet the Tubers.

League warfare will play second fiddle to the cup games, with the German Sport Club tackling the Valley Camp team and Lawrenceville meeting Harry Sickles' booters.

The German Sport Club is having the best season of its career. The club has departed from its usual procedure of using only members of the club, and, with a good defense and a smart attack, apparently is going places.

Remaining Games On Football Card

Saturday—Notre Dame vs. Southern California, Los Angeles; North vs. South, Baltimore Stadium, and Oregon vs. Louisiana State, Baton Rouge, La.

Gene Tunney Tells Story of His Life

tering offer, the consciousness of my security with two jobs overcame vanity.

I said to Jacobs:

"Why should I box professionally? I have two positions, both of which are paying me fairly well."

By this time, I had gotten another position. I was still with the steamship company, where I had advanced to the "important" and "responsible" position of rate clerk. The second job was that of athletic instructor and club organizer at Public School 41, for which my development in general athletics and boxing had qualified me. Curiously enough, I was recommended for this position by Dudley Field Malone's sister, Mae, who was a representative of the Board of Education at Public School 41. She had made me the junior chairman of the board of governors two years earlier. The board of governors decided what the activities would be in the absence of the chairman. I presider. It seemer to me that the chairman had a knack of always finding an appointment elsewhere on the night of these board meetings. However, I was later rewarded for the time spent in this way by receiving the position mentioned above.

URGED TO FIGHT

At my rebuff, Jacobs, not being altogether discouraged, turned to Green and another friend, Eddie O'Brien.

Eddie O'Brien was one of those old-fashioned saloonkeepers who never let a drop of alcohol pass his lips. Though he sold many thousands of gallons in the liquor business, all he ever did was smell it and sell it. Eddie was the father of several children about my age. A son, Edward, Jr., was in my class in St. Veronica's School for several years. "Old Eddie," as we called him, to differentiate him from his son, had an ardent, fatherly interest in me.

Eddie knew a great deal about prize-fighting, having been for many years a member of the Avonia Athletic Club, which turned out some great fighters—Jack Goodman, Harry Schumacher, Tommy Maloney, Kid Black and others. All the Walker boys—Jimmy, the recent Mayor of New York; Doctor William and George—were members of the Avonia Athletic Club.

Eddie was confident that I was a great fighter. He used to say in those early days:

"Gene, you are the greatest fighter I ever seen."

Jacobs' appeal to Green and O'Brien was heard by eager and enthusiastic ears. The idea of a star bout and the consequent reflection of glory that would be theirs convinced them they should persuade me to accept the match. O'Brien put it to me in this manner:

"There ain't no fellow ever produced in this city ever had such an offer, and you can lick anybody they throw into the ring with you."

They finally induced me to accept the match. I lay awake most of the night anticipating injuries to be sustained and regretting my decision.

MAKES DEBUT AT 18

The evening of the match came around all too soon, and I found myself sharing a dressing room with K. O. Eggers in the dingy Sharkey Athletic Club. This club was nothing more than a loft, with tiers of wooden benches to the ceiling, in an old building on Lincoln square. It was an absolute firetrap. How they got permission from the fire department to hold matches in it is still a mystery.

Upon my being introduced to K. O. Eggers by Billy Jacobs, who is not to be confused with the present manager of Max Schmeling, Eggers said:

"This Bobby Dawson is a tough fellow, but not clever. I boxed him four years ago and gave him an awful beating for 10 rounds. You won't have any trouble with him. Don't be afraid of him."

This knowledge, though given in the best of faith, did not add to my confidence. I weighed for this match about 140 pounds and was just 18.

Tunney, in the next chapter, will take you into the dressing rooms and rings of the tough old Sharkey and Fairmont Athletic clubs where other youthful rib-crackers punched each other for pittances.

DUTRA 'FRISCO MEDALIST

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Led by Olin Dutra, 1932 P. G. A. titleholder, a field of 64 qualifiers prepared today for match play competition in the annual San Francisco open golf tournament over the tricky Lakeside course here.

Dutra yesterday shot a fine subpar 70 to win medal honors. He cracked par figure by a single stroke, being out in 34, with a birdie three on the sixth, and came home in 36, even par for the incoming stretch.

Only Dutra was able to match the par test of the course. Two strokes behind him were Jimmy Thomson, of Colorado Springs, and Charley Sheppard, of Oakland, Northern California open titleholder.

While most of the better-known touring pros were able to land in the ranks of the 64 qualifiers, Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., remained in the running only after the second-nine comeback that saw him equal par 36 for a total 77.

RECORD CROWD TO SEE IRISH, TROJAN DUEL

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—When Notre Dame and Southern California meet at Memorial Coliseum to settle their football differences Saturday a record crowd for the country this season will sit in on the festivities.

The season's high in attendance jointly is held by the East and West. Eighty thousand witnessed the Notre Dame-Army game at Yankee Stadium while the same number of spectators took in the Stanford-California struggle.

Coach Howard Jones' contract as football mentor at the University of Southern California was renewed yesterday for a five-year period. The present contract has another year to run.

While no statement of salary was made, it is understood the new contract will call for the same pay as the old one, which was generally understood to be approximately $12,000 a year.

In his eight years as coach at Southern California, Jones' grid elevens have won 72 games, lost 10 and tied two. They have either won or tied for the Pacific Coast Conference championship six times in that period.

An end at Yale, where he was graduated in June, 1908, Jones coached at Syracuse, Yale, Ohio State, Yale again; University of Iowa and Duke University before coming to Southern California in 1925.

IRISH SET LINEUP

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Notre Dame's starting lineup for the game Saturday with Southern California, which has been telegraphed to Los Angeles, failed to take into consideration the reported illness of several of the Ramblers' stellar performers.

Ray Brancheau, halfback, and George Melinkovich, fullback, considered to be among the half dozen influenze victims, were listed on the eleven which Notre Dame authorities sent as the starting team. The lineup was as follows:

MARY FAITH — By Beatrice Burton

she began to work at Nesbit's, and since that time there had been only one man in the world for her—Kim.

"Mr. Nesbit," she said when Mr. Nesbit had laid down his fountain pen and was blotting the last of the letters, "Mr. Nesbit, I want to tell you that I am going to leave at the end of this month."

NESBIT SURPRISED

"I'm going to be married on the first of October, Mr. Nesbit."

He went on frowning at her a moment or two longer.

"Married," he said finally in a flat, colorless voice. "I see."

"I'm sure Miss Bartlett can do my work, and I think she'd like to have the position." Mary Faith went on. "If you decide to give it to her I'll be glad to show her everything she'll need to know, before I leave."

She waited for him to answer her; but he said nothing. He sat looking at her with a puzzled, curious look in his eyes.

The room was very still. Outside the half past five whistles began to blow. An unseen door somewhere in the building banged twice. In the outer office Stanley Odeskalki began to whistle "The Wedding of the Winds." He had been whistling maddening bits of it all day long.

Still he said nothing, and there seemed to be nothing more for her to say. She turned to go, and at her sudden movement Mr. Nesbit gave a start as if he were waking from a deep reverie.

"Wait a minute," he said. "I—I suppose I should have been expecting this. But the fact is that it takes me completely by surprise. Somehow or other, I've never connected you with the idea of getting married and going away."

AN UNUSUAL ACTION

He got out of his shining mahogany chair, crossed the office and held the door of it open for her as she went out—a thing he never had done for her before in all the time she had worked for him. A thing that no employer ever does for his secretary or for any other person who works for him, as Mary Faith knew very well. It was as if he had forgotten all at once that she was his employe and was seeing her for the first time as a young and beautiful woman.

Her own little room opened off his office. Her desk stood against the wall that faced his door. She sat down at it and put the letters he had just signed into their envelopes.

When she raised her head from her work a moment later he was still standing in the doorway looking down at her in that same puzzled, frowning way.

"Did I tell you that I'm sorry you're leaving?" he asked. "I meant to, if I didn't. I'm going to miss you, Miss Fenton—" He seemed to be on the point of saying something else to her; then suddenly he changed his mind apparently, for he shook his head and went back into his own office, shutting the door of it behind him.

DID EXTRA WORK

She knew that he would miss her when she left Nesbit's. For, in addition to her regular work, she did all sorts of little odd jobs for him. Every year she sent out his Christmas cards. She picked out the presents that he gave to his mother and his two sisters on their birthdays.

When he was too busy to leave the office at noon she always sent Stanley Odeskalki out to buy a bottle of milk and a sandwich for him.

She kept at bay all the people he did not want to see; and by some miracle she did it without hurting their feelings. There was no doubt that Mary Faith had a "way with her" when it came to dealing with people. Almost everybody liked her.

She was more than a secretary to Mr. Mark Nesbit. She was the guardian of his comfort and his peace of mind all day long, six days a week, year in and year out. . . . Of course, he would miss her.

Mrs. Puckett's family hotel in River street was none of your ordinary boarding houses.

It had been a fine old place when Mrs. Puckett bought it, 20 years before, and it was still a fine old place.

Its walls of red brick were worn smooth by many rains and snows. The bay trees that stood in tubs on either side of the door were always neatly trimmed. The door was painted white, and its brass knob shone like a small sun.

Within there were oriental rugs faded to soft blues and grays and pinks. There were old mahogany chairs that were the color of port wine. There were bookcases with latticed doors, and there was a pair of East Indian vases on the parlor mantel.

"Dining Room Open to the Public."

INVITED TO DINNER

That small sign, with its neat, black lettering on a white background, had been the means of changing the whole course of Mary Faith's life.

For on a certain Sunday night in November four years before, Kim Farrell and his mother had seen it in the window as they passed the house; and they had come in to have their supper there.

That was how it had happened that Mary Faith met him. She had fallen in love with him before he left the house that night, and three months later she had promised to marry him.

There was a note from his mother lying on the table in the hall when Mary Faith let herself into Mrs. Puckett's house that night.

"Dear Mary Faith:

"Kimberley wants me to ask you to have dinner with us tonight. He will stop for you at half past six.

"Amelia K. Farrell."

"Half past six" . . . It was 25 minutes past 6 that very minute! Mary Faith flew up the two flights of stairs that led to the top floor of the narrow three-story house.

Her room was a large one with three windows that looked out across the housetops and chimney-pots to the distant trees of Haltnorth Park, three blocks away.

It was filled with things that she had been collecting for more than three years. There was a breakfast set of pink sprigged china on a table in one corner. On a shelf above the bed was a row of books and above the books hung a Simon etching.

HONEYMOON GARMENTS

Under the bed, hidden by a valance of dotted Swiss, was a battered steamer trunk filled with the linens she had embroidered. On the writing desk lay a scrapbook half full of household hints and recipes that she was always clipping from newspapers and magazines.

The bottom drawer of the old bureau was filled with the garments that she had bought for her honeymoon. A breakfast coat of creamy silk. A combing jacket of yellow satin with high-heeled mules to match. A little lace cap trimmed with yellow rosebuds. Princess slips and dance sets. Five yards of thick smooth satin o' the subtle shade that Mr. John Galsworthy calls "moonlight color." Mary Faith had bought it for her wedding dress almost two years before and it had lain in the bottom of the drawer ever since.

It was true that she loved Nesbit's and she got a certain pleasure from her work there. But she was the kind of woman whose life never could be filled by an office career. She was the kind who would rather clean cupboards than keep files in order, who would rather run a sewing machine than a typewriter.

To potter around the room, wiping the dust from the set of china, picking the withered leaves from the plants on the window-sill, satisfied some home-making housekeeping instinct in Mary Faith.

FIANCE IS LATE

But tonight she had no time to potter about. All of her movements were swift and sure. She slipped out of her tweed office dress while she stepped out of her pumps. In five minutes she had washed her face and hands, brushed her hair and buttoned herself into a plain black silk dress that Kim had always liked.

"Even my hair looks happy tonight," she told herself, smiling at her reflection in the mirror as she pulled her hat down over its crisp shining waves.

It was 25 minutes to 7 when she ran downstairs. The front hall was empty. So was the parlor. The doors of the dining room stood open and through them came the buzz of voices and the clatter of dishes and silver. The boarders—"my great big happy family," as Mrs. Puckett called them sometimes—were at their evening meal.

Five minutes went ticking slowly by. Mary Faith opened the door and looked out. River street lay empty and silent under its arc lights.

Ten minutes . . . fifteen, and still no Kim. He never was on time for anything or anybody. He often said that he had no sense of time.

It was seven minutes past seven when he rang the doorbell.

"Sorry if I'm a bit late," he said when Mary Faith opened the door. "A man came in to see me just as I was leaving the office."

He stood there, unsmiling, with the darkness behind him.

He was an exceptionally good-looking young man, tall and straight and broad-shouldered. He was gray-eyed and ruddily blond. His nose and his cleft chin were almost too well-cut. If there was any weakness in his character it showed itself in his sensitive, sulky-looking mouth.

Outdoors the night was cold and still. The stars looked so big and bright and near that Mary Faith felt that she could stretch out her hand and touch them all if she tried to.

SUSTAINED BY FAITH

"What a lovely night, Kim," she said as she trotted down the steps beside him, "and what a lovely world. . . . Kim, I'm so happy I'm foolish. I've been walking on air all day long. You'll never know how hard it was for me to get down to earth long enough to tell the people at the office that I'm leaving. . . Kim, I just can't believe that we're really going to be married in two weeks!"

But she did believe it, of course. For almost four years she had been sustained by an absolute faith in the happiness that she and Kim were going to find in their life together. And now that happiness was almost within their reach. . . . It was as close as the large yellow stars that hung just above River street.

Kim's car, a roadster without a top, stood at the curbstone. He jumped into it and Mary Faith got in after him. There had been a time when he tenderly helped her into the car first, but that had been a long time ago in the first delirious days of their engagement.

"Kim," Mary Faith said as they started off, "what did your mother have to say about our getting married on such short notice?—When I saw her last night I began to feel a little bit shaky. You don't suppose she's going to try to talk us out of this, do you?"

Kim didn't answer. In the glow of the dash-light she saw his eyebrows draw together and a muscle in his cheek twitch as his jaw tightened.

And all at once she sensed that there was some change in him. He was not the Kim who had kissed her good night in Mrs. Puckett's parlor the night before. . . . She looked at him again, trying to penetrate the secret of his difference. There was something sullen and resentful about him tonight.

STOCK MARKET MOVEMENT IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—The stock market found the outlook too befogged for ambitious speculative undertakings today, and prices backed and filled apathetically.

The list firmed for a short time in the morning, but eased off a little in the middle of the day. Important business or corporate news was lacking, and attention was again directed to the war debt situation, with the meeting in Paris of Prime Minister MacDonald and Premier Herriot.

International banking quarters have been predicting of late the British debt payment due December 15 would be paid, but have been less certain about the French payment, and in some quarters, there was considerable conjecture as to the possible international repercussions of a default.

Considerable interest attached to the monthly sales report of General Motors, in view of the statement that dealers' stocks were the lowest since comparable figures were compiled, starting in 1922. While motor makers have been viewing the outlook for 1933 with much conservatism, it was pointed out that in view of the low level of stocks, any pickup in sales should be quickly reflected in manufacturing activity. General Motors sales by dealers to the public in November were reported at only 12,780 cars, but this was mostly from stocks, as sales by the company to dealers were only 2,405 cars.

A little selling came into the copper shares, in view of the return of the metal price to 5 cents a pound, approximating its historic low, and the apparent inability of the leading world producers to reach a new agreement on curtailment of production. It was unofficially reported that American Telephone's report of station installations in November would show about the same loss as in October.

WHEAT CLOSES IRREGULAR

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—A steadier tone developed in grain values today after early setbacks.

Buying on the part of houses with eastern connections had much to do with giving comparative strength to the wheat market during the late dealings. Bearish effects of an unexpected increase of the government cotton crop estimate on production were short lived. Meanwhile, apprehension of damage to the new domestic winter wheat crop owing to insufficient snow protection and because of prolonged drought was receiving greater notice.

Wheat closed irregular, ⅛ off to ⅛ up compared with yesterday's finish, corn, 1@⅜ advanced; oats, unchanged to ⅛ higher, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

WALL STREET SCANS HOOVER MESSAGE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—President Hoover, in his last general message to Congress, has again drawn heavily on his inventory of policies and recommendations, which presumably were rejected at this last election.

Nevertheless, confronted with the anomaly of a lame duck session of Congress, the Chief Executive did the dignified thing in presenting his own convictions on prevailing questions.

Mr. Rukeyser

The remedy for this unsatisfactory situation lies in ratifying the lame duck amendment to the Constitution, rather than in hoping that the outgoing President will bring out an entirely new and refurbished line of political and economic policies, after a rebuff at the polls.

TRADE VOLUME SLIGHTED

From my viewpoint, a serious shortcoming in the President's message was the lack of emphasis on the desirability of promoting gross volume of business. By implication, the President slighted this consideration, especially in his stressing the alleged desirability of cutting down on Federal public works and on all public expenditures. At the same time the President turned his face against inflation.

The Chief Executive neglected to delineate alternatives. Obviously, the basic economic problem at present is to bring the fixed charges of business into balance with prevailing commodity prices and gross volume. If prices are not raised through inflation or through some variation of price fixing, the chances are that the adjustment will have to be made in numerous instances through voluntary or involuntary scaling down of domestic private debt, though of course the process could be mitigated by a substantial improvement in gross volume of business.

SALES TAX ADVOCATE

With any improvement in gross, business corporations would promptly reflect the vast improvement in operating efficiency which they have made in the last three years. Under prevailing subnormal volume, the gains in operating efficiency are not correctly reflected, inasmuch as the unit cost of commodities tends to rise as volume falls off. In other words, business again needs an opportunity to achieve the benefits of mass production and large scale distribution. Under existing operating conditions in the best managed industrial and transportation enterprises, a relatively small increase in gross volume would be reflected in a substantial improvement in net profits.

Spot-lighting by the President of statistics of business pickup through October from the July low point gave a temporary stimulus in the financial markets. Wall street also like the President's advocacy of the general manufacturers' sales tax, and Main street ought to like the President's insistence on thoroughgoing banking reform.

Financiers also admired the President's plea for a reduction in benefits to veterans for ailments not connected with war service.

Western Governors Back Silver Parley

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—The Western Governors' Conference yesterday adopted a resolution indorsing the calling of an international conference to consider the position of silver.

The resolution recommended that in the event the international conference fails to agree upon a satisfactory plan, the President and Congress take up independent action by the United States to increase the value of the metal.

Eleven states were represented at the meeting.

Reo Motor Planning Capital Reduction

DETROIT, Dec. 8.—Reo Motor Car Company stockholders at a special meeting December 27 will vote on a proposal to reduce authorized capital to $10,000,000 from $20,000,000 and to change par value of the stock to $5 a share from $10. It is also proposed to write down fixed charges by $4,479,766, and set aside $405,545 as a reserve for contingencies.

Glidden Company Wins Patent Suit

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Federal Judge Campbell, in Brooklyn, has dismissed the complaint and refused the application for an injunction filed by E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company against the Glidden Company, alleging infringement of a patent covering the method of reducing the viscosity of nitro-cellulose used in the manufacture of lacquer and film.

U. S. Lead Stocks Off in November

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Lead stocks at the works of smelters and refiners in the United States on November 1 totaled 254,958 short tons, comparing with 257,730 tons on October 1 and 209,912 a year ago, according to American Bureau of Metal Statistics.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The bond market zig-zagged somewhat indifferently today over a narrow range, with indications that most traders and investors were reverting to their recent policy of ultra-caution. The heaviest trading of the session was in United States government issues, most of which were fractionally higher at one time. French government 7s and 7½s held around their 1932 high marks and British 5½s firmed. Japanese issues improved a trifle. The Australians and Germans were uncertain.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—Transactions of the total new bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, (000 omitted in sales column; United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

RAILS PRESENT SEVEN-POINT PROGRAM

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—The railroads, tooting for a clear track to prosperity, delivered a bulky document to Calvin Coolidge and his associates today.

It contained the story of the railroads' plight, a plea for "equality of opportunity" and a seven-point program intended to rescue the nation's gigantic network of steel and rolling stock from a situation called grave.

Alfred P. Thom, general counsel for the Association of Railway Executives, spoke for the railroads of the country in presenting the statement to the national transportation committee, headed by Coolidge.

Summarized, the recommendations were:

"1—Amend the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act so as to permit loans to railroads upon certificate of the Interstate Commerce Commission that a proposed loan is, in its judgment, adequately secured or that the past record of earnings of that carrier and its prospect for future earnings furnish reasonable assurance of the applicant's ability to repay.

"2—Repeal the recapture provisions of Section 15-A of the Interstate Commerce act, which requires a railroad to give the government one-half of its earnings above 6 per cent.

"3—Federal and state regulation of commercial vehicles operating over the public highways.

"4—Federal government should retire from barge operation on the inland waterways in competition with the railroads and the railroads should be permitted to operate on the water, including service through the Panama Canal.

"5—Railroads should be relieved from oppressive taxation, and government subsidies to various other agencies of transportation in competition with the rail carriers should be discontinued.

"6—Enactment of federal legislation as to railway consolidations or unifications, to encourage voluntary consolidation under proper supervision.

"7—Relaxation of existing regulations of the railroads in order to enable them more nearly to meet the competition of other agencies of transportation, and application of similar regulations so far as applicable to these new forms of transportation so as to bring about equality of opportunity."

The seven points did not cover the question of wages, now a moot one, but elsewhere in the statement Thom said:

"The railroads wish to emphasize the gravity of the problem confronting them and their investors and the public, in what they believe is the serious maladjustment of railroad wages. They regard the present level of railroad wages as unjustified and profoundly injurious to the public interest."

The Coolidge committee, which includes Alfred E. Smith, was formed by savings banks and insurance companies to investigate the troubles of the railroads and survey all forms of transport. It is expected to suggest legislation at the conclusion of its labors.

LABOR CHIEF RAPS THOM

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—On the eve of a wage conference here with railroad officials, A. F. Whitney, chairman of 22 unions of rail employes, denounced Alfred P. Thom, general counsel for the Association of Railway Executives, for his statement to the Coolidge committee and also current scales of pay.

Whitney said that the wage level "is not sufficient to enable railway employes to maintain themselves and their families in ordinary decency." He continued:

"Seven hundred thousand of them are in the bread lines. The rail labor organizations are handling the wage matter with a national committee of railroad executives authorized to speak for the carriers.

"We certainly resent any effort on the part of the carriers to place labor in the wrong light before the public by suggesting or permitting an unauthorized tribunal to butt in on the wage qestion."

The order, signed by Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe, directed Young and the bankers to appear with books, statements and other documents relating to the Insull company and transactions between it and the banks and the General Electric Company.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—December 16, barring injunction proceedings, has been set as the date for public auction of collateral held by Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company against loans of nearly $6,000,000 to the National Public Service Corporation, subsidiary of the Middle West utilities system. Receivers of Middle West Utilities Company are opposing the proposed auction.

THREE WOMEN

By FAITH BALDWIN

Louisa's Hate Continues After Young Relatives Leave Her Home

CHAPTER XLII.

Elizabeth and Louisa had forgotten Joyce and the immediate issue. Joyce stood where her mother had left her. She held one hand in the other, she felt the brain back of her eyes ache with the endeavor to see these two, unclouded, without preconception or prejudice, as if she saw them for the first time.

"I have never hated you," denied Louisa. "I have hated your sin. You—you are too unimportant to hate. If I have kept you from what you call life, love, it was because I could not permit any decent man to take you into his house, ignorant of what I know. If I have kept you from your child, it was because I hoped to save her from her heritage, from the consequences of her mother's erring weakness. Unto the third generation, Elizabeth—it was of no use."

"You lie!" cried Elizabeth clearly, "and you know it. You have hated me because your son loved me; because Lennox loved me more than he did you; because he loved me so much. And I loved him so much that our union didn't wait on ceremonies. You have hated me because you were jealous. Jealous of our own son; jealous because I had from your son what no man had ever given you—love, I tell you. And you have hated yourself because you brought it about. Where do you think I have been all these years? What do you think I've been doing? I've had nothing to do but look back and understand, when you sent for me, when I was brought here at 17, why did you do it? Because you knew Lennox, you knew his nature. You knew why that nature was his. A dark inheritance! It came to him from you. You thought to marry him to a little fool—to me, a girl who'd be a good wife, a docile daughter-in-law. So you threw us together, you watched, you bided your time. And you destroyed yourself, Cousin Louisa, for we loved each other—we wanted each other—we had each other! Do you suppose I don't know? You haven't forgotten for one moment in all these years that Lennox was happy in my arms—that he forgot you in my arms—that he was mine, mine, always."

COMFORTS MOTHER

Louisa was ashen, ghastly. "Stop—I won't listen. Stop!" she said. But Elizabeth went on, a little mad, flinging this burden from herself as if it had been a garment, emerging free—

"And then when, later, the mature love came to me, what did you do then? You threatened me with exposure. You'd tell him, you said—and I let him go—without a word. I let him go, thinking what he would of me. Don't you suppose I see now what he would have understood, that he would have gone on loving me? But I was afraid. That's what you've made of me, a craven thing, shrinking from sunlight, a ghost, beaten and futile and not quite human."

She stopped, looked wildly about her with the eyes that had been turned inward. She put her hands before her face and broke into a storm of sobbing.

Joyce ran to her, comforted her against her heart. Over her mother's abased head she looked at her grandmother.

"You'll not do this to me!" she said. "And when I leave this house my mother goes with me!"

Louisa's face was a marble mask. She asked, with a meticulous courtesy, "May I inquire how you will live—or if you'll earn your bread by—"

"You needn't say it!" cried Joyce, feeling Elizabeth stiffen, rigid, in her arms. She touched her mother's pale hair. "I'll find a living, so will my mother. She's a young woman. We'll not want—and we have friends."

HAS SOME MONEY

"It would be interesting to know who they are," murmured Louisa. "As for you and your mother, my money bought the clothes you wear, and you'll take no more than those from my house. Nor will I raise a hand to help you, not if you starve."

Elizabeth spoke for the first time since her outbreak. She spoke as if Louisa were not in the room, she looked appealingly at her daughter, her eyes swollen in a devastated face.

"There's a little money," she said, childishly. "When my mother died it came to me. I have it in a savings bank. I've never touched it. I wanted you to have something from me some day. We could live on it for a while—"

Joyce soothed her with a word, turned back to Louisa. "Do you see what you've done to her?" she cried. "But it's not too late. She has me now. She never had me before. That was your doing."

Mrs. Sheldon made no response. She fixed her hungry, stabbing eyes on Joyce, asked her formally, "May I ask what you purpose to do now?" . . .

"Work," said Joyce. "Learn. Grow strong and clean. Learn to be a daughter. Learn to see life clearly. Learn to teach my children some day what pity is and love and understanding."

"Children!" Louisa flung at her.

ORDERED TO LEAVE

"Why not?" asked Joyce. "Do you suppose this is the end—this one thing I've done? Do you suppose that in all the world there's no man to want me? Do you suppose you can threaten me all my life as you have her, that you can reach out, dead or alive, to harm me? I know my own punishment. You have no part in it. Do you suppose I won't dare to be honest, when the time comes? Do you dream that I won't regret—regret that I had not waited until certainty came to me, regret that I shall have robbed my lover? But I'll have no shame, I tell you. Understand that! I'll have work and hope. I'll have pity and comprehension. I know now! I know what I have to give, what I have never given. It will all be there, waiting, growing, when the time comes."

"Leave me—leave my house—leave—"

Joyce turned, swept up the discarded garments. She put a free arm about her mother. Elizabeth clung to her desperately. Slowly, her head high, supporting the older woman, she passed from the room, from the house; passed by the big car, waiting, the chauffeur asleep on the box, passed by her own little car, brave and dusty at the curb.

Louisa Sheldon was alone in her dismantled bedroom. The odors and heat of the city beat up from the pavements. There was no assuagement, even when night came.

HATRED CONTINUES

A tray, untouched, lay on a hastily dusted table. The caretaker had shuffled in with it, had gone out again. She sat below stairs now, listening for a summons, talking to the chauffeur. She had given him his dinner, he waited for orders; now they whispered together uneasily, speculating.

Louisa sat by a window in the Boston rocker. She thought, staring out into the night.

"Where have they gone? To whom!"

She tried to follow them with her mind. She knew they had found shelter somewhere. Mother and daughter.

She set herself to doing sums. How much money lay in Elizabeth's savings bank, had lain there for years, the little, unconsidered legacy, untouched, the interest accruing? Was it $3,000? Was it more? Enough to see them through for a time?

And when that was gone?

They'd work, Joyce had said. Well, they'd have to.

Louisa went to her desk, pulled the covering newspapers from it. She would write a note tonight, that woman downstairs could mail it. She'd write to her lawyers—some one would be in the office tomorrow. How did her will read? It was difficult to think—everything, she fancied, to Joyce—"to my dearly beloved granddaughter."

Not now. Joyce was nothing to her. She had been stolen from her, as Lennox had been.

Louisa pulled a sheet of writing paper toward her and opened the bronze inkwell. The ink was dried, encrusted. She plunged a rusting pen into it, put it to the paper—the pen scratched. She could not form letters. Rage shook her—this last trivial obstacle between her and her determination.

She bore down upon the nib, angrily, grindingly. It split and scattered the last thick dregs of ink upon the paper. Louisa threw it to the floor, put her hand to her heart.

The old agony.

"Lennox," she called. "Lennox!"

She rose, staggered to the door between her room and her son's. He was there, next door, he would help her.

"Lennox!"

She beat on the door with her fists. She thought the sound thundered through the house. In reality the feeble blows were no more than dry leaves falling.

He would not let her in.

He was not there. He had gone—with Elizabeth!

She thought, clearly . . . they've killed me between them.

She tried to get back to her desk, anything would do, pencil, anything—just to set down her wishes—to summon the legal men.

She put her hand to her head. It was bigger than the world, heavier. It was bursting.

She tried to call out. She had no voice. She was already unconscious. As she fell the darkening mind spoke, for the last time. I will not die, it said.

And the mind within her mind answered.

No, you'll live months, years, perhaps, unhearing, unseeing, yet knowing—unable to tell them what you want done—you'll live—beyond the body—voiceless, willess—in your hatred and your love.

Now she had fallen heavily. Now she lay there. She was without sense, she was as a dead woman, yet still that mind within her mind spoke that living thing that was outside of her body, beyond consciousness, immune shriveled, immortal.

She saw with her blind eyes through those sleepless eyes. She saw Elizabeth back in the old house, moving about softly, directing the nurses — she saw Joyce.

Footsteps beat hollowly on the uncarpeted stairs. She did not hear them. Terrified voices spoke beyond the door. She did not hear them.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Coming right on the heels of the announcement made in these columns yesterday about the "canned goods" matinees which are to be held in the 15 Warner Theaters where the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club meets each Saturday, the management of the Warner Theaters sent the following letter to the Sun-Telegraph:

Editor,
Sun-Telegraph,
Pittsburgh, Pa.,

Dear Sir:—

Knowing that the Sun-Telegraph is doing more than its share in helping Father Cox, "father of the jobless," to feed and clothe the poor and needy of Pittsburgh, and realizing that the strain both financial and mental must be a tremendous burden on Father Cox, we are pleased to inform you that all of the foodstuffs received at the Sheridan Square Theater, 6108 Penn avenue, next Saturday, will be turned over to the "Father Cox Unemployment Relief Fund" so that Warner Brothers Theaters might in some small way help him carry on this great work.

Father Cox, when told this over the phone, said:

"Please convey to the management of the Warner Theaters my sincerest thanks. I know that the amount of food they will turn over to me from the Sheridan Square Theater will make many an unfortunate family happy."

FOOD FOR NEEDY

So to the boys and girls who are planning to attend the Sheridan Square Theater Saturday, all the "canned goods" that you bring will help to feed the less unfortunate who, through no fault of their own, are forced to join Father Cox's breadline.

The doors of the theaters will open at 10 a. m. and the theaters participating in these "canned goods" matinees will be the Arsenal, 4109 Butler street; Belmar, 721 North Homewood avenue; Cameraphone, 6202 Penn avenue; Etna-Harris, 433 Butler street, Etna; Harris South Hills, West Liberty avenue, Mt. Lebanon; Kenyon, 819 Federal street; Manor, 1729 Murray avenue; Plaza, 4765 Liberty avenue; Rowland, 913 Wood street, Wilkinsburg; Schenley, 3942 Forbes street; Ambridge, Ambridge, Pa.; Memorial, McKeesport, Pa.; Washington, Washington, Pa.; Grand, Greensburg, Pa.

FOR LOCAL RELIEF

All the food collected at the door as the price of admission will be turned over to the relief agencies in the district in which the theater is located, except that collected at the Sheridan Square, and will be distributed by them to the poor of that particular neighborhood.

These matinees are not limited to members only. Any boy or girl that would like to contribute his or her share to this worthy cause will be more than welcome. After the special food matinees the regular meeting of the Sun - Telegraph - Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club will take place, with an entire new show. So boys and girls here's your chance to see two great shows this Saturday.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS

Fair and Square Proposition

By slipping over the beer ukase Congress has a chance to go down in history and come up for the third time.

That's what the voters voted for in November and that's what they want in December.

Naturally, we can't go into this thing without experts. Congress should send out a commission to test the beer in other lands and to determine its effect on the heels.

Science has already dashed to the aid of the party who is a good man, but can't stand his lager. Speery has invented a pocket gyroscope.

Before launching out for the evening you place the pocket gyroscope in your vest. When you start taking Dutch corners the gyro whirls in the opposite direction and equalizes the load.

Desk sergeants in the station houses are so confident the

You remember that old test don't you? If you could walk the chalk line without freezing your brakebands you were okay. Provided that you could also elucidate truly rural without getting the loo in front of the ool.

That was the oldtime literacy test. If you qualified you were entitled to do some fancy figure-skating on your way home again.

If you can do all this you don't need a pocket gyroscope. The Bug feels that he is entitled to a position on any commission appointed by Congress. Back in his Washington days he graduated from the Portner Brewery at Alexandria, Virginia. It was so popular a college that no student ever went home for the holidays. We loved our teacher.

We will promise Congress that there will be no expenses for the commission. We will buy all the ingredients essential for the nimble experiment. All we ask is that the better-informed lawmakers tell us where we can buy it.

Betrayal of the Public By 'Dry' Congressmen Will Not Prevent Repeal

There are two aspects of the vote in the House of Representatives on the subject of prohibition repeal.

The heavy majority of 272 to 144 in favor of submitting repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to the action of the states reflects the great change of public opinion which found expression in the recent election. The same Congress which earlier this year defeated a resolution for the submission of the question to the people now shows a decisive majority in favor of so doing.

The Garner resolution, however, failed to muster the two-thirds vote which, under the Constitution, is necessary for a resolution aiming at the repeal or amendment of any part of the Constitution.

---

For the Congressmen, whether Democrats or Republicans, who voted against the resolution, not one word can be said in justification, excuse or extenuation.

THEIR ACTION was A BETRAYAL OF THEIR PARTY and their party platforms, whether they are Republicans or Democrats. Both parties had included in their platforms declarations in favor of the submission of the question to the several states. The resolution which was defeated was an accurate and fair expression of the declarations of both national parties.

It is impossible to find an explanation for the action of the members of the House who voted in the negative, except in the tenacious hold which bigotry has on certain types of minds; in the resentment of some at their defeat for re-election, or, in the churlish resolve of poor losers to play out to the dreary finish the role of unsportsmanlike and ugly tempered men.

It matters little to men of the type described that their action can be effective but for a few weeks.

It matters little that the cause which they opposed and had the power momentarily to arrest is certain to prevail.

Being FAITHLESS REPRESENTATIVES, it probably disturbs them not at all that by their action they will greatly contribute to prolonging the depression; to the aggravation to the farmers' distress; to the accentuation of unemployment, and to the retardation of business revival in every part of the country and in every branch of industry.

They have fastened upon themselves the stigma and the odium of being forever regarded as unworthy Americans and faithless Representatives.

Their action has deprived their country, which is struggling against unparalleled difficulties, of a legitimate revenue of which it stands in sore need.

Instead of lightening the insupportable burden of the taxpayer, they have fastened it more securely upon his back, and intercepted and struck down a great measure of relief which was almost within his grasp.

When one reflects that of these 144 votes—A VERITABLE ROLL OF INFAMY—81 votes were cast by "lame ducks," who will not serve in the next Congress, the scandal stands forth of allowing Representatives who have been spurned and rejected by the people to continue the farce of acting as their Representatives.

The American people will be heard from, we have no doubt, and in no uncertain tones. Monday was a depressing day for republican institutions in the United States. But the end is not yet.

THIS COUNTRY CANNOT BE GOVERNED BY DISLOYAL MEN, NOR WILL THE PEOPLE SUFFER THEMSELVES TO BE BETRAYED BY THEM.

The New Judge

Ralph H. Smith Is Independent, Courageous and Experienced, and Should Give Good Service.

Ralph H. Smith, who has been appointed to the Common Pleas bench to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Joseph M. Swearingen, will be the youngest judge in the history of the local courts. But he is 34, and that is not too young. History is full of instances of even younger men who have acceptably filled positions of equal responsibility.

Mr. Smith has had extensive experience in the courts as assistant district attorney, assistant United States attorney, and deputy attorney general. His learning in the law is attested by the fact that he teaches law at the University of Pittsburgh.

With this valuable background he has the additional fact in his favor that he is courageous and politically independent. Since he owes nothing to the Republican machine, he can be counted upon to deal out even-handed justice in election cases.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot has chosen wisely from among the numerous candidates for the place whose names were submitted to his consideration.

Is Death the End?

The Darrow-Musmanno Public Debate on This Question Will Have Educational Value.

The current issue of the Atlantic Monthly contains a letter from a scientist to a priest in which the former, a professor of geology in the University of Southern California, laments his inability to believe in things that the priest accepts, such as the survival of human personality after the death of the body. The professor maintains that such a belief is incompatible with scientific doctrine.

"Modern Scientific Knowledge," by Frederick A. Cleveland and collaborators, a textbook used in the University of Pittsburgh, maintains that life is nothing else but a chemical phenomenon, an aspect of matter, and flatly asserts that intelligence or consciousness cannot exist independently of the brain and nervous system. Death, according to this view, ends all.

But there is a vast amount to be said on the other side, from the standpoint of science and the standpoint of common sense, as well as from the standpoint of religion; and, depend upon it, Judge M. A. Musmanno will say it, clearly, eloquently, forcefully, in his public debate with Clarence Darrow at Carnegie Music Hall next Monday evening.

The debate will have educational value, and the proceeds will go to charity—two reasons why it should draw a large audience.

His clothes are tighter than a drum

Now Old Man Congress should trot out

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Christmas—The Acid Test

Christmas always has been and always will be the turning point in many a budding love affair. Little do the cheerful postman and the jovial deliveryman know how many hearts they break or how many romances they shatter when they hand in those fascinating, mysterious-looking parcels around the holiday season.

* * *

This is because a holiday means so much to a woman—and so little to a man. And because every woman has a secret hunch, or intuition, that a man's love or regard for her can always be measured by his enthusiasm or indifference on Christmas Day.

To a man, Christmas is just another holiday; but to a woman, there is a magic—a glamour of romance about it—that sets it apart from all other times. She wants something to HAPPEN. She is looking for a SIGN! And she knows that there are two infallible signs of love.

* * *

The first of these is a man's desire and determination to be WITH her especially on holidays and important days, when he is hitting the high spots.

* * *

NOTHING can keep a man away from a woman in whom he is interested, except jail or a broken leg. From the moment she enters his life and his consciousness, everything else, his clubs, his friends, his duties, his social obligations and even his golf—fades into insignificance beside the chance to be in her company. If he can't get TO her, he'll get into communication with her, if he has to walk a mile to telephone, or spend his last cent for a wireless. That's why, when a woman doesn't hear from or see a man on Christmas Day, something goes dead inside her—and she knows that the light has gone out.

The second sign of love in a man is his desire to DO things for a woman, to give her things, to surprise her and play Santa Claus to her. To make her happy!

* * *

The most self-centered man on earth will suddenly forget his own comfort and become tender and solicitous as a mother, when he falls in love. And the tightest tight-wad will feel an impulse to open his pockets and buy you some "nonsense," like flowers or silk stockings or gloves or furs while he's under the spell.

* * *

You can't judge a man's love by the value or costliness of his presents. Not THIS Christmas—or any Christmas. You can't even measure his interest by the amount of thought or judgment he has put into its selection. Because, when it comes to buying gifts for a woman, a man just HASN'T any judgment, and his power to think goes on strike.

* * *

But don't, for a moment, imagine that the man who FORGETS you on Christmas, and neglects to send you SOME idiotic token of his regard, really loves you. He loves only himself!!! Or some other woman.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 8. — Man-about-towning also makes a soft-slippered exit. One of the last of the boulevardiers was debonaire Ben Ali Haggin, portrait painter, bon vivant and accomplished first nighter. I saw him last in the ticket cage coil at a neighborhood movie.

Otto Kahn was another exquisite, who could be depended upon to froth into splendor where life foamed fiercest. He, too, has taken to a polished fireside bench and essays by Montaigne. A few of the younger fry try to carry on the E. Berry Wall tradition, but in a minor key.

There is Jules Glaenzer, valiant apostle of bandbox spruceness, giving occasional tantivy to the once-vivid chase. Also, Bertram Taylor, whose bachelor penthouse is an after-theater rendezvous. And Peter Arno, whose ribald drawings add huge irony to the modern farce.

Yet, with few exceptions, run-of-the-mill boulevardiers are like Arnold Bennett's fictionized men-about-town—complete bores. A true worlding, in the perfection of his glossy art, requires two essentials—wealth and leisure. And scarcely anybody has those any more.

In the prosaic calm spreading the social sheen of the town, and especially the theater, another Diamond Jim Brady, abreast of life, would provide a glorious twinge. Such types are not essential but, at least, they provide a conversational cliche other than depression.

* * *

Speaking of Peter Arno, I was at a dinner recently where he also was a guest. During the evening his equally-talented former wife, Lois Long, came along, squired by another gallant. She bowed around the table and, as it came time to face Arno, there was a tense calm. But it immediately vanished, with a cheery "Hello, Peter," and a responding "Hello, Lois." Which is as should be.

* * *

In the penumbra of grievances, fancied or real, it was long my custom to avoid speaking to the targets of my dislike and thereby add to life's discomfitures. A man whom I thoroughly disliked, and still do, cured me. We were thrown together constantly, each feigning the customary studied indifference. One time, in the ante-room of a night club, he said: "I don't like you any more than you like me. But this is too much trouble. We at least can say: 'Hello'," And we have, since.

* * *

Indeed, there are times when I think friendly enemies go out of their way more to help each other than do staunch friends. This man, a disinterested spectator tells me, hotly defended me at a dinner at which I was being scotched by a couple of the Algonquin boys. In turn, I made it possible for him to secure a contract he could not have secured otherwise. I suppose that some day we will meet and swing right off into a waltz.

* * *

I wish something could be done about that unfinished deluxe apartment on Central Park South. It stands as though in ghostly rage at some violated economic law, the glaziers' white cross-bone X on every window. Unroofed, rain corrodes its nickel plumbing, and there is the odor of decaying houses which have the reputation of being haunted. I started to explore it the other night, walking from a theater. It was imagination, but somehow, in the shadowy depths, I seemed to see a white flutter, the wraith perhaps of desecrated financing.

* * *

Thingumbobs: Jack Buchanan wears skin-tight shirt cuffs . . . John McCormack sends $1,000 every Christmas to five women who befriended his mother in Ireland . . . May Allison Quirk has signed for an $800 article with Photoplay . . . Only three people knew Jimmy Walker was sailing. . . . Robert Sherwood has bought a huge English estate, with barns and dairy, for $14,000.

* * *

A shaver, with a shower of freckles, two upper teeth missing and a dog of miscellaneous ancestry on a rope, was a back-door caller today. "I gotta sell Spot," he lisped. "My muvver's hungry." I didn't buy Spot, but I gave the lad a bill. And so, I discover, did everybody else around the building.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

When I was little they told me that I should always be a good girl.

But how, I demanded, would I know how to be a good girl? How would I know what was being good and what wasn't?

My conscience, they assured me, would tell me.

What was my conscience? Was it like my stomach? Did it ache when I was bad?

No, it wasn't like my stomach. They couldn't tell me exactly what a conscience was, or how it worked. Nobody knew—not exactly—but it was something deep inside me that would always tell me what was good and what was bad.

Always? Yes, always.

Wouldn't it ever, ever make mistakes?

No, consciences never made mistakes. If I would just listen to my conscience and do what it told me, I would always be good.

And so, with this extremely rudimentary information, I started on the hazardous pursuit of righteousness. My conception of conscience was still vague. Something in the nature of an alarm clock, I gathered; though why I should be born with alarm clocks ticking in my small insides was rather bewildering. Nevertheless, I had no doubt that the Older Generation knew what it was talking about, and that my Conscience would act up according to specifications.

But, of course, I as speedily disillusioned; almost immediately I was doing things which I considered to be entirely right, but which proved to be completely wrong!

And, just as often, my conscience advised me to shrink from doing things which seemed absolutely wrong, but which proved to be most bravely and beautifully right!

How come? Wasn't my conscience on the job. I listened attentively; but the more I listened, the more bewildered I grew.

Sometimes my conscience whispered, as I had been told it would. In fact, to be quite accurate, it fairly yelled its admonition. But was that any guarantee that the admonition was correct? Anything but! Often it was the worst steer I could possibly have received.

Again, when I was desperately confused and in urgent need of immediate guidance, the darned thing didn't even yeep!

Worst of all, I soon found that, by even the slightest cajoling, I could make my conscience take either side I wished. In fact, it would obligingly TAKE BOTH SIDES AT ONCE!

And so, with much shock and surprise, much secret trembling and open rebellion, I came to the sad but sensible realization that CONSCIENCES AREN'T INFALLIBLE.

There is, indeed, something in every spirit that cries out for truth and courage, kindness and decency—but it has to do its crying through so many layers of cowardice, stupidity, selfishness and greed that the original message is always distorted, often lost.

That doesn't mean that we shouldn't "try to be good." But it does mean that we must struggle for a knowledge of goodness, instead of sitting back and letting Conscience hand us the low-down on a silver platter. We must discover what is good and determine what is bad by ourselves—and pay the price. Which is usually plenty.

In short, a real conscience isn't born and can't be borrowed. It must be built by our own efforts—our own painful experiments and perilous decisions.

YOUR CONSCIENCE IS AS GOOD AS YOU ARE—AND AS BAD. IT IS AS SILLY AS YOU ARE—AND AS WISE. ITS DIMENSIONS ARE EXACTLY THE DIMENSIONS OF YOUR OWN CHARACTER.

YOU SHAPE YOUR OWN HEAVEN, STRANGER — AND YOU PICK YOUR OWN HELL.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

Why blame others for the setbacks you have had?

It may be true that others have had something to do with the failures you have met, but was not most of it due to your own inefficiency?

Despite the advice of friends and relatives you have entered upon undertakings that were destined from the first to be failures.

While others have made a success while you were employed by them, you have believed that you could be equally successfully in their line.

There is a great difference between making a success as a helper and making a success as the manufacturer.

Very often those under the direction of competent superiors are able to do good work, but when they assume the responsibility of direction, fail utterly.

If you were as proficient as he the chances are you'd be in his place.

If you are a success in your line, better stick to it, rather than hazard your living.

Roosevelt's Gospel of The New Leadership

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

In his article, "Your New National Leadership," in the January Cosmopolitan, Gov. Roosevelt gives us a Gospel of the New Americanism. By "New Americanism" I mean a mere bringing of the old Americanism up to date. Every American inclined to a cynical interpretation of the effect of the election should read this article.

He will find a tone and temper with which he has not been familiar for a long time. Naturally the future President does not undertake to treat all the problems in detail in such an article. All he set out to do, we suspect, was to make a confession of faith to indicate the spirit of his approach to the problems that must be solved.

This he has done. It is a new spirit, or, rather, it is the old American spirit brought up to date. And the central thought in all of it is that we must get back to the old Jeffersonian ideals of justice and fair play in business and government, and that government must rid itself of the notion, so tragically dominant during the last 12 years, that it has no concern with the average man; that a nation is a mere aggregation of great corporations and financial groups; that government is merely a subordinate agency of these.

Shows Determination To Do the Right Thing

This was the tone of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign utterances, and this tone in these had much to do with the result at the polls. We are accustomed to hearing candidates speak an attractive language before the polls open and become tongue-tied immediately afterwards. Not only become tongue-tied, but to suffer a lapse of memory.

There is significance and inspiration in the fact that here is a former candidate who talks and writes now as he talked and wrote before the election. It means just one thing—that he was sincere then and is sincere now. With a will, a determination to do the right thing, the battle is half won.

Mr. Roosevelt thus continues to write about emergency relief for the jobless; but he will not be content with temporary measures meaning no actual reforms. Here is language such as we have not heard from such a quarter for more than a decade:

"If our present social order is to endure, it must prove itself worthy of our toil and self-sacrifice and of the lives of those who have been before us. And it must prove itself worthy within the next few years."

That is the spirit of the new leadership; it is a civilized spirit and one of common sense.

Plans to Aid U. S. Farmers

Again we find Mr. Roosevelt writing of the problem of the farms—just as though the campaign were not over! No problem is more difficult; it is all the more difficult because so long neglected. On its solution depends the restoration of a sound national prosperity, for until we find a way to rehabilitate the farms and restore the purchasing power of the 30,000,000 involved there can be no economic health in America.

The solution may be difficult; a plan may not prove effective, but with a leadership knowing that without a solution there can be no relief working upon it, we reasonably may hope for results.

It is the spirit that counts.

Tariffs Dam Flow of Trade

Again we find the former candidate writing of the effect of the prohibitive tariffs precisely as he did before the election, and we find a new note here:

"The building of a higher tariff fence about ourselves has caused foreign retaliatory tariffs and prevented even the simple exchange and barter of goods internationally. By reciprocal agreements with other nations we shall have opportunity given to lower our tariff fence to permit the resumption of international trade. The United States can lead in outlining the mutual restoration of trade and thus facilitate exchange."

This, of course, is a decided departure from the policies of the regime soon to pass out. It foreshadows a more enlightened policy. It means action.

We have little patience with the ballyhoo that international trade can move again only on condition that we assume the debts of the world. Tariffs, not debts, have dammed the flow of trade.

Demands Payment Of Just War Debts

"Debts owed the United States by foreign governments must be paid. It is sound common sense to assist our debtors in every way, but there is neither practicality nor honor in cancellation."

And then, too, he strikes the national note Americans insist upon, and never has this been more necessary than in these days when America is being bombarded with foreign propaganda as never before since the days just preceding our entrance into the war. Thus:

"The new national leadership will deal fairly, honestly and sanely with this situation. It will remember, however, that as society is now organized we are divided into nations and that it is the duty of your national administration first to consider the welfare of its own people."

That is what England is doing, and France and Italy—why not America?

Insists on Beer Before Repeal

Nor has Mr. Roosevelt changed his view with the closing of the polls on the necessity of affording better protection to honest business against dishonest business, and to individual investors in securities. He says that "domestic speculation and stock thievery, personal and corporate, must be put down." He outlined his plan for this in the campaign; he reiterates it now.

Nor has he weakened in the least on the prohibition issue. He insists that the mandate of the people be carried out by initiating the movement for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. And more:

"Pending the outcome of this action, there will be immediately put forward legislation to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer."

But behind all these plans looms the really significant thing—the presence of a new interpretation of the purposes of government. It is this new interpretation which means so much to the great mass of men and women.

"I shall repeat many times that I shall ceaselessly endeavor to bring government back to a more intimate understanding of and relation to human problems. This is essential, that government may serve the basic purpose for which it was originally created."

The reason we have so much cynicism and skepticism concerning our American institutions and their capacity to serve mankind is that our old leaders have been leaving the human equasion out of consideration; the reason democracy is questioned now is not because of inherent weaknesses in its philosophy, but because under the old leadership we have sought to graft the processes of plutocracy onto the forms of democracy.

If these institutions are to be preserved we must use them in the old Jeffersonian way; and that, as we see it, is the intent of Mr. Roosevelt. He proposes to interpret Jeffersonian democracy in terms of the times. We have been wandering too long in strange pastures and after false gods—we must get back home.
